The Lindbergh Child
To Help the Idle
They Also Serve
Work for 15,000

—By Arthur Brisbane—

TEN MINUTES BEFORE this was written, at 6:15 yesterday afternoon, the city editor brought word that reporters had been requested to come to Hopewell, Col. Lindbergh's residence.

And at this moment comes an Associated Press bulletin with the announcement that the Lindbergh child has been found dead. No more dreadfully shocking news could be imagined, nothing that could produce so great a horror of the depths of criminality to which this nation has been reduced.

Yet the dreadful end of a horrible tragedy will be for the unhappy parents almost a relief from the uncertainty, the constant wondering and worrying about the child by day and in the dead of night. It means the end of an agony that has lasted week after week for so long.

It means, above all, that the little boy is forever beyond the reach of man's hideous brutality. His spirit is set free, nothing can ever harm him now. His parents must find what comfort they can in that thought and in the profound sympathy and affection of an entire nation.

The information given out by the governor of New Jersey is meagre, at this hour, only that the child's body was found "near the estate." How long ago the death occurred is not stated. What happened can only be surmised—that the crime was that of an insane person; that it was an act of revenge, which is inconceivable; that the child died or was killed elsewhere and brought back, to prevent detection. A thousand theories are discussed.

But one blessed fact is established. The child is safe at last. It is not in brutal hands, crying for its mother. And she knows that her baby is beyond the reach of harm or suffering, mercifully released from danger forever. She can think of the little soul at peace, the beautiful face as she used to see it. And the child will have a grave chosen by her, and lie within reach of her loving thoughts and prayers.

Senator Robinson suggests a fund of two billions to take care of the idle. The President is said to favor it.

Why not go the whole way, and adopt the five billion fund suggestion made by W. R. Hearst months ago? This is not a time to make "two bites of a cherry." The money would not be handed to city politicians to be spent "for the good of the organization." Many undertakings might be selected and financed that would pay for themselves when completed, such as the tunnel under the North river, built by New Jersey and New York, that earns millions a year, and many other public enterprises highly profitable.

ATTY. HARRIS SUSPENDED FOR 3 YEARS

Judge Pierce Acts on Hitchcock Report of Auto Insurance Case

Attorney Herbert B. Harris of Boston and Cambridge was suspended from practice for three years by Judge Pierce of the Supreme Court today for improprieties in connection with an auto insurance claim.

Harris was attorney for Ralph Nasuti of Braintree, whose son was injured by an auto. The company offered to settle for $1300, but Nasuti held out for $1500.

The lawyer then took the $1300 from the company and gave a release, purporting to be signed by Nasuti with a cross.

Harris said he was in great need of money at the time because his sister was seriously ill.

Since Hitchcock's report was made to the Supreme Court, Harris has made restitution of $1300 to the insurance company, which has settled with Nasuti for a slightly larger amount.

New York, May 13—The last hope is shattered.

That which we had feared has happened.

Now we know.

That kid of Anne's and Lindy—the nation's child, the world's baby—is dead.

And has been dead for long days and weeks while, around the civilized globe, mothers' hearts have ached and men have clinched their fists and muttered.

That kid, with the halo of sunny hair, never harmed anything or anybody. He was one of those fresh, new, smiling, happy spirits in a hardened world.

REICHERS HOPS FOR EUROPE

Harbor Grace, N. F., May 13 (INS)—Lou Reichers, 31-year-old American airman, took off from Harbor Grace at 5.51 a. m. E. S. T. today on an attempted non-stop solo flight across the Atlantic.

Reichers, flying his low-winged monoplane, hoped to reach Dublin without a stop at 9 p. m., E. S. T. He planned to refuel there and then continue to Paris.

CHARLES AUGUSTUS LINDBERGH, JR.

..."The little toy friends are true—
Aye, faithful to little Boy Blue they stand, each in the same old place;
What has become of little Boy Blue, since he kissed them and placed them there."

BULLETIN

Trenton, N. J., May 13 (AP)—After a lengthy conference, Atty.-Gen. William A. Stevens left the State House today on a mission he indicated might provide developments. "When we come back," he said, "we will have something for you."

Marshall said he was ready to seek murder indictments as soon as evidence warrants.

New York, May 13 (AP)—Dist. Atty. Charles B. McLaughlin of the Bronx announced late today he is investigating evidence which leads him to believe the $50,000 turned over by Dr. John F. Condon to the kidnapers of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., was paid to Bronx men now hiding in that borough.

"We have a multitude of clues," the prosecutor added.

Trenton, N. J., May 13–Events moved rapidly this afternoon in the grim pursuit of the fiends who battered Baby Lindbergh to death and then threw the body of the golden-haired, defenseless child into the bushes only four miles from his father's home.

There were hints of immediate arrests for murder late today, following a series of determined conferences among officials.

Two men—the 72-year-old Dr. Condon, the "Jafsie" who paid over $50,000 of Col. Lindbergh's money to swindlers in New York, and John Curtis, the Norfolk business man who has made several supposed contacts with the kidnapers and probable child-murderers—were subjected to a long and thorough grilling.

Clear Up Many Weird Happenings in Long Hunt

The officials want and demand all the facts, and these men must drop the veil of secrecy which has heretofore covered their alleged contacts with the kidnapers.

In smashing through this screen of secrecy, the officials began to clear up some of the weird events which have marked the lond and futile hunt for the child. They learned how and why "Jafsie" paid over the $50,000. They learned why Curtis and his fellow negoiators at Norfolk believed they had actually contacted the kidnapers, and why they persisted in claiming the child was alive and well.

They learned, also, that Col. Lindbergh was actually at sea with Curtis to make a direct contact with the supposed kidnapers and presumably pay over more money, when the battered and

ANNE, LINDY WON'T SEE BABY'S BODY

Trenton, N. J., May 13 (AP)—The broken little body of "The Eaglet" will be laid away without his parents having seen it.

Anne and Charles Lindbergh always will remember their lost son as a handsome little chap, with yellow curls and blue eyes and a radiant smile.

Frank W. Swayze, the undertaker in charge of the body, said today he had been informed neither Colonel nor Mrs. Lindbergh would see it.

It will be placed in a sealed coffin before it is delivered to them, he said. He did not know when the burial would take place, or what the funeral arrangements were.

Of those whom he had learned to know and trust in the few months that were his span of life, only his nurse, Betty Gow, saw the body of little Charles Lindbergh.

He used to call her "Gow."

SWINDLERS USE DIAPER PINS AND NIGHTROBE

Trenton, N. J., May 13—Prosecutor Erwin B. Marshall, in a conference last midnight with Dr. John F. Condon at the Lindbergh home, was informed the sleeping suit missing from the Lindbergh baby's body had been turned over to him in the negotiations which resulted in the payment of $50,000 ransom money.

The sleeping suit, Dr. Condon said, is now in the possession of Col. Lindbergh.

PLAN UNITED ACTION

The State and country officials gathered in Trenton today to plan concerted action to bring the criminals to justice.

Among those at the conference were the Attorney-General of New Jersey, prosecuting officials of two counties, in which the Lindbergh estate lies, and Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, superintendent of State police, who has had general almost unrecognizable body of his child was found almost within sight of his own home.

"Jafsie" Goes Home After Meeting; Curtis Remains for Further Talk

"Jafsie" was permitted to go home late today, fully exonerated, according to the men who subjected him to a long and searching examination at the Lindbergh estate.

Curtis was still at the Lindbergh home at the request of officials. He will be further examined later, on the chance that he may be able to furnish some information.

Neither man is under arrest and neither is under any suspicion, according to officials.

Believe Deliberate Murder as Plan for Huge Swindles

Officials late today were inclined to the belief that both Condon and Curtis have contacted the kidnapers or their agents. This raised the theory that the child stealers deliberately murdered the baby, taking away with them certain pieces of attire, such as the sleeping suit and diaper pins, to use in swindling Col. Lindbergh of the heavy money demands and at the same time knowing that the child was lying half buried in leaves and rubbish, a horrifying testimonial to the brutality and fiendishness of the swindlers.

"I a mconvinced that Dr. Condon was in touch with the actual kidnaper of the Lindbergh baby, or the representatives of the kidnapers."

Prosecutor Marshall of Mercer County made this important announcement late this afternoon after he and New Jersey state police had questioned Dr. "Jafsie" Condon.

Marshall will prosecute the case in the event the police, now engaged in one of the greatest manhunts in American history, succeed in tracking down the slayer of the baby.

Documents Convince Officials "Jafsie" Met the Kidnapers

The police were concentrating on the theory that the man with whom Condon dealt was the kidnaper—perhaps the slayer. The light woolen sleeping garment the baby was wearing on the night of March 1 when he was abducted was not on the body when it was found yesterday.

JOHN H. CURTIS OF NORFOLK, VA., ONE OF KIDNAP 'ENVOYS'

"I questioned Dr. Condon last night for 50 minutes as he rode in an automobile from Princeton to Hopewell," said Prosecutor Marshall, and he was questioned again today.

"Condon gave me a clear statement. He also gave me several documents.

"From the statements made by Condon, I am convinced that he was in touch with the actual kidnaper or the representative of the kidnapers. I shall check all the documents he gave me."

Lindbergh, Almost a Prey to Swindlers, Late in Getting News

Col. Schwarzkopf, head of the State police, disclosed in an "official bulletin" the fact that at the very time the body of the baby was found, a gang of swindlers were attempting to mulct Col. Lindbergh out of more ransom money. The gang was trying to convince the distracted father they were the kidnapers and had the baby.

Nine hours passed before Col. Lindbergh, cruising on a yacht off the New Jersey coast, and confident he was about to receive his son back alive, knew the baby had been found dead.

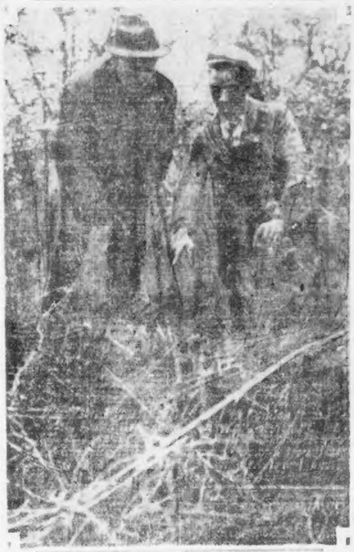
A radio code had been arranged so that Col. Lindbergh could keep in touch with the police and his home.

When word was flashed yesterday afternoon that the baby's body had been found, something went wrong with the radio receiving set on the yacht Marion, however.

Again and again, while Mrs. Lindbergh waited, striving to keeep from breaking down, a radio operator repeated the message desperately. Not until midnight did the Marion pick it up.

The yacht immediately made for a landing place, near Atlantic City. A car awaited Col. Lindbergh there. Shortly after 3 a. m., after a wild 200-mile drive, he arrived home, pale and exhausted.

'WE FOUND THE BODY THERE'



ORVILLE WILSON WILLIAM ALLEN

Here are the two men who found the mutilated body of little Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., pointing to the identical spot where the discovery was made on Mount Rose, near Hopewell, N. J. William Allen, Negro truckman, made the actual discovery and called Orville Wilson, his companion, to view it before they drove to Hopewell to notify the police. (International News telephoto.)

Col. H. Norman Schwartzkopf, State police head, stepped out of the shell of reserve he has occupied since the night of March 1, and became instantly transformed into a man-hunter, to whom every man and woman was a suspect.

The hunt, he believed, was for a madman, a fiend, muscled either by intense hatred or overpowering fear, who struck the child dead with two terrific blows over the head, probably within an hour of the time of the actual abduction.

TRAGIC FIND SPURS HUNT FOR BABY'S BRUTAL MURDERERS

He said that in addition to Curtis and Condon a number of other persons who "purported to have information" were questioned.

"A considerable amount of information was obtained and is being followed up," he added.

No weapon has been found.

The remains of Baby Lindbergh, skull crushed by inconceivably brutal blows, lay in a Trenton mortuary. Neither Colonel nor Mrs. Lindbergh had viewed the body, so far as could be learned, and no plans for burial were announced.

The announcement that Dr. Condon ("Jafsie") and Curtis had been questioned and turned over to "prosecuting authorities" was the first definite indication that police finally were ready to throw aside their "hands off" policy concerning private negotiations and demand from the intermediaries a full account of their actions and of the information upon which they have been acting.

Text of Ransom Demand Revealed by Lindy

Hopewell, N. J., May 13—(US)—Here is text of original Lindbergh kidnaping note, now given out for the first time:

"Dear Sir:

"Have $50,000 ready, $25,000 in $20 bills, $15,000 in $10 bills and $10,000 in $5 bills. Have them in two packages.

"Four days we will inform you to redeem the money. We warn you for making anything public, or for notifying the police.

"The child is in gut care. Identification for letters are signatures. Answer three fold. Two rings in blue ink, with center ring of red. A blue ink line of the blue circles on the outer edge of the red. A hole on the outer edge of each dark circle, and one in the center of the red.

Man Who Paid $50,000 Ransom Treated as Privileged Character

Until now their contacts with the supposed representatives of the kidnapers have been treated as privileged communications by the police authorities who have from the start been backward in their desire to avoid doing anything which might jeopardize the life of the child. Now there is no need for further consideration and Schwarzkopf and his aides are grimly determined to get all possible information from Condon and Curtis which might be of value in the hunt.

Condon, who was the "Jafsie" of the various mysteriously worded advertisements in the case and who paid the $50,000 ransom, and Curtis arrived at the Lindbergh home shortly after midnight.

At Trenton Prosecutor Marshall said, after a conference at the State House, that no one was under suspicion for the slaying "at this time," but that there might be an arrest "any time."

"But there may not be any arrest for a few days," he added. "We are not going off half-cocked on this thing. We are going to study this case and know where we are going."

Marshall, who, as prosecutor of Mercer County, has jurisdiction now, because the body was found in that county, although the kidnaping occurred in Hunterdon County, said he was unprepared to advance any theories.

State troopers were questioning every resident of the wild country, particularly in the region of Mount Rose where the body was found.

A particular "group of persons" was being sought for arrest. Who they are and where they may be found police would not say, but indicated they are, or were, local residents.

Official belief was general that the kidnaper and slayer of the baby was a fiend, and that revenge, rather than ransom, was the motive.

Every Resident of Mount Rose to Be Quizzed in Probe of Vengeance Motive

Partciular significance was attached to the announcement that Col. Lindbergh had lived for a time last summer in one of the six houses in the little hamlet of Mount Rose, a short distance from the shallow grave into which the body of his golden-haired, first-born, was flung.

This was during the period while his own house on the mountain was under construction and he was giving certain details there his personal attention.

The possibility that he may have made an enemy of someone in Mount Rose during his stay there resulted in every inhabitant of the tiny settlement being subjected to prolonged questioning.

This phase of the search was also being extended into the settlements of the "Pineys," the queer, illiterate people living in the hills and amid the cranberry bogs not far from the house.

The big house of sorrow, with its foundation laid on the fame of the famous airman, was a house of deeper sorrow today—but it was still a house of courage.

To it, Col. Lindbergh came home from a trip which he had hoped would have a joyful ending in the safe return of his son.

He is believed to have been engaged in an attempt to bring to a climax the long weeks of futile efforts on the part of the Virginia negotiators, when he received the terrible word that the end of the trail had been reached, so close to home, so far from his own efforts, so distant from his hopes.

"He took it bravely," Col. Schwarzkopf said.

There are few clues. One is a battered thermos bottle found within 50 yards of the body. In it, it is conjectured, the kidnaper may have carried warm milk to give sustenance to the stolen child. Yet it may have been there, exposed to the weather, for a year or more.

There were no footprints found near the grave. The storms of the past two months have erased them.

The land where the little body was found is owned by St. Michael's Orphanage, of Hopewell, another ironic gesture of fate in the tragedy.

William Allen, the Negro truck driver who made the ghastly find, and Orville Wilson, his companion on the truck, remained at the Lindbergh home throughout the night and with Curtis and Condon again will tell their stories to the prosecuting officials in preparation for the grand jury investigation.

The police head said that the whole territory in the vicinity of where the body was found had been "scoured" and samples taken of the surface of the ground for the purpose of analysis.

The absence from the body of the white sleeping suit worn by the baby when he was stolen was considered of unusual importance, police said, but in what light they would not disclose.

Two Heavy Blows on Head, Delivered Deliberately, Caused Death of Baby

The autopsy, performed by Dr. Charles A. Mitchell, county physician, ended any possibility that the baby had been smothered to death or had died from exposure, and made all too evident the ghastly murder.

Two heavy blows on the head ended the life of the baby. It appeared as if someone had held the baby in his or her arms and deliberately hammered him on the head.

The skull had been fractured on the left side and the fracture extended from the top to just behind the left ear. A blow dealt on the right side of the head just behind the right ear caused another fracture and left a hole nearly the size of a 25 cent piece. The left fracture was sufficient alone to cause death.

The medical examiner found that decomposition of the body had progressed to the point where it was logical to surmise the baby was slain immediately or very soon after the kidnaping.

The body had been buried, or partially buried, head down in

Anne, Soon to Become Mother Again, Suffers Her Agony in Silence

By DOROTHY DUCAS

Hopewell, N. J., May 13 (INS)—And so endeth the story.

It is indeed the end. Not until the lifeless body of her baby was found did Anne Lindbergh believe it. But now she knows her hopes were mere will o' the wisps. Now she realizes there is nothing more worth mentioning to be said.

Who kidnaped little Charlie Lindbergh? Why did they kill him? Where can they be found? These may be important questions for the police, for society.

To Anne Lindbergh everything has been told in that one word—"dead."

She sits silent today, silent and frozen. Her mother and the friends, who have tried for 73 days to cheer her, find nothing to say, save that she must be brave for the sake of the new baby to be born in September.

She nods woodenly. Of course, she will bear up for that unborn child's sake. But why not? It is all over now—the anxiety, the futile prayers, the eager search for a missing baby.

Gone is the mother's self-hypnosis, induced by repetition of the consolation: "He is safe and sound." The baby who would have had two candles on his cake next month is dead. No use telling herself comforting fairy tales now.

But Ann Lindbergh does not sob, scream, nor call out loudly against a fate that has snuffed out a little boy's life. Always reticent, reserved, undemonstrative, even now she keeps the torrents of her emotion locked up tight.

They say she did not weep when the police informed her, gently of course, that a body had been located. Instead, she went to the telephone and tried to get in touch with her husband, who had been gone for some days on another of his hectic searches for the boy. She tried for almost an hour before she reached him. He said he would return at once.

They did not let her see the the baby that had been chubby and rosy when last she saw him. They did not tell her that the coroner had reported the baby's head had been fractured and that there was a hole in his forehead an inch wide. If they had she might have consoled herself with the belief it was not her baby—no one could prove it was!

But Betty Gow, the Scotch nurse who tended the child, went to the morgue in Trenton and saw the miserable little skeleton that had been lying under leaves for more than two months. She looked, her mouth swung open, she cried: "Ah!" in a gruesome whisper, and leaned heavily on the two state troopers who stood at either side of her.

For she saw the twisted first and second toes of the right foot that were the identifying marks of the baby from the first; she recognized his blond hair, his eight upper teeth, his large head. And the nurse was convinced this was her little charge. Gow returned to the Lindbergh home to face the mother of that dead baby. One look at her face and Anne Lindbergh knew the worst.

She has not yet been told officials believe the child died as the result of a "fractured skull due to external violence." Perhaps that knowledge would be the last straw. Enough that the baby was stolen, that he is dead. To know that he had been killed by a bullet wound, a blow with a "blunt instrument unmercifully wielded" or "banged against a tree" would be the final twist of the knife in her heart.

Body Found Where Orphans Prayed

Mount Rose, N. J., May 13 (AP)—The land where the Lindbergh baby's body was found is owned by St. Michael's Orphanage of Hopewell

The 500 children of the orphanage had been praying daily that the child might be left unharmed at the door of their institution. Every morning they would look on the steps to see if the child was there.

Dr. Hibben Says That Anne Is Bearing Up as She Has Done

Princeton, N. J., May 13 (AP)—Dr. John Grier Hibben, president of Princeton University and close friend of the Lindberghs, said today that Mrs. Lindbergh, although overwhelmed with grief was "bearing up just as she has all along."

Dr. Hibben has been to the Lindbergh home many times since the baby was stolen and was one of those who offered to act as intermediary if the kidnapers were afraid to deal directly with Col. Lindbergh.

Betty Gow's Folks in Glasgow Are Shocked

Glasgow, May 13 (INS)—Members of the family of Betty Gow, the Lindbergh baby's nurse, were shocked today to learn of the discovery of the murdered child's body.

"It is terrible," John Gow, Betty's brother, said. "The Lindberghs have all our sympathies. It must have been a terrible ordeal for them and for Betty, too."

It was up this ladder that the kidnaper crawled to steal Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., from its crib. By this ladder the baby, now dead, was taken away. EVERY AGENCY OF MAN USED IN WORLD SEARCH FOR BABY

HUNDREDS OF CLUES SPURRED HUNT, BUT ALL IN VAIN

New York, May 13 (US)—March 1: Lindbergh baby kidnaped!

May 12: Lindbergh baby found dead!

These two news flashes that electrified the entire world, marked the beginning and end of a crime that held the horrified attention of more millions than have ever been interested in any one matter before.

Col. Charles Augustus Lindbergh was a popular hero in every country where news is distributed. The Chinese paused in the midst of the struggle that was devastating their homes to send messages of sympathy to the bereaved parents; Indians in the remote fastnesses of the Andes held fantastic religious ceremonies to try to bring his baby back to him. Leaders of nearly all civilized nations expressed the heartfelt anxiety of their peoples.

In between those two dramatic messages was a long record of clues and counter clues, of frenzied investigations and fruitless results, of patient, hopeless examination of a thousand clues that led nowhere.

Police of the entire world placed their experts at the disposal of Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the New Jersey State police, and those of the principal cities of the United States actively co-operated, as did Scotland Yard, but all their labors ended in nothing when the body of the baby was found.

Baby's Cold Kept Family at Hopewell

On March 1, a Tuesday, Mrs. Lindbergh, the former Anne Morrow, decided not to go back to her mother's home in Englewood as she had planned, because Baby Charles had a cold, and instead, telephoned the baby's nurse, Betty Gow, to come to the Lindbergh estate at Hopewell, N. J.

Betty Gow bathed and fed little Charles, the 20-months-old, and put him to bed in the nursery at Hopewell at 7:30 o'clock. Some time later, Col. Lindbergh, who had been in New York, drove home, and dined with his wife.

After dinner he sat for a long time at his desk, facing a window just below the open window in little Charles' nursery. At about 10 o'clock, Betty Gow went to the nursery to see if the baby was all right and found the crib empty.

Ransom Note Demanded $50,000

They found a home-made, three-section ladder outside the window, and a ransom note demanding $50,000.

Local police and state police were notified after the first hurried search of the grounds around the house.

The next day, March 2, the world grieved with the Lindberghs. Footprints were found leading toward a nearby lane, where car tracks were found. Neighbors said they'd seen a strange car in the vicinity and a youth who lived nearby said he'd seen a car with a ladder.

By March 3, despite special mail clerks and staffs of telephone and telegraph operators, the Lindbergh home was swamped with letters, telegrams and telephone calls giving "clues."

March 4, Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh issued an appeal to the kidnapers, promising not to try to harm them if they would return the baby, and indicating that any demands would be met.

Nurse's Fiance Grilled, Fails to Aid Search

On March 5, a conference of police experts of many cities was called at the State House. Henry "Red" Johnson, sailor friend of Betty Gow, was questioned by Hartford, Ct., authorities. Johnson denied any knowledge of the kidnaping.

On March 16, Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh issued a statement appointing Salvatore Spitale and Irving Bitz, New York racketeers, as their representatives to deal with the underworld.

During the next few days police in many cities held or questioned various women with babies—always the wrong baby. Gov. A. Harry Moore of New Jersey announced that he "knew the baby was alive," and Scarface Al Capone, underworld overlord, announced from his Chicago cell that if he were released he would try to bring back the baby. President Hoover discussed the offer with his cabinet, but no action was taken.

On March 22, H. Wallace Caldwell, a member of Chicago's "secret six," visited the Lindbergh home, but nothing happened.

Various other suspects were taken into custody and released during the days that followed.

Norfolk Trio Efforts to Contact Kidnapers

On March 24, the Very Rev. H. Dobson-Peacock of Norfolk, Va., electrified the world by saying:

"I hope to deliver the baby to its parents within the next 72 hours."

He, Rear Admiral Guy Burrage, retired, and John H. Curtis, former wealthy shipbuilder, began a long series of startling statements and movements during negotiations with the supposed kidnapers. The three made many trips on land, sea and air, and conferred frequently with Col. Lindbergh to no avail.

Then it was learned that Dr. John F. Condon, Fordham University professor, had received a communication from men Col. Lindbergh believed were the real kidnapers. For several weeks, Dr. Condon communicated with these men by means of a series of newspaper want "ads" signed "Jafsie."

$50,000 Paid, Lindy Victim of Double Cross

Then, on April 10, convinced that the men were the kidnapers, he paid over $50,000—money put up by Col. Lindbergh—to the men in a cemetery near his home in the Bronx. He later said Col. Lindbergh himself sat in a car a block away while the money, in bills of small denomination, passed hands.

The colonel and some of his associates immediately left for the Massachusetts coast, where Dr. Condon said the receiver of the ransom had said the baby would be found.

Two days of futile search followed. Finally, convinced those who received the money were not going to live up to their part of the bargain, Lindbergh gave a list of the serial numbers of the bills to the Treasury Department.

The numbers were sent far and wide. Some of the bills were reported found, but the discoveries did not lead investigators any nearer to a solution of the mystery or discovery of the child's whereabouts.

Then, on May 5, Gaston B. Means, ex-convict, and former Department of Justice agent, was arrested in Washington, D. C., charged with obtaining $100,000 from Mrs. Evalyn W. McLean, wife of the publisher of the Washington Post, on the claim that he was in communication with the kidnapers and wanted to pay that amount of money as ransom to bring the baby back to its parents.

The final report before the hope-shattering discovery of the baby's body, was that Col. Lindbergh was aboard a yacht with Mr. Curtis, somewhere off the Long Island coast, trying to get in touch with the kidnapers.

Prays Law Is Restored by Lindy Case

As members of the Massachusetts House bowed for the opening prayer today, the Rev. Abbot Peterson, chaplain, prayed that the wave of horror at the slaying of the Lindbergh baby might result in restoration of law and order.

He said:

"Almighty God, as we stand for this morning prayer our hearts go out in sympathy to those young parents whose tragic loss is in the minds of all this day.

And our prayer is that our abhorrence at this detestable crime may result in more than a momentary flaring up of our sympathies.

"May it crystallize our determination to do our part that the reign of law and order shall be restored to our land, that the sanctity of the home be protected and that life be made safe again for law-abiding citizens.

"Hear our prayer.

"We ask it for thy mercy's sake. Amen."

Spanish Press Reflects Sorrow and Indignation

Madrid, May 13 (INS)—Mixed indignation and lamentation filled the pages of the Spanish press today over the death of the Lindbergh baby.

"Never has the death of a child so touched the world's heart," said El Sol.

"Any measures taken by the United States to rid herself of such criminals will not seem too drastic to us," commented A. B. C.

Lindy's Mother on Her Way to Hopewell

Detroit, May 13 (INS)—Her head bowed in grief by the shocking news of her little grandson's death at the hands of kidnapers, Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, mother of Col. Lindbergh, left today at 8:35 a. m. for New York. She will go from there to Hopewell.

NORFOLK 'NEGOTIATORS' STUNNED BY NEWS OF BABY'S MURDER

Norfolk, Va., May 13 (AP)—While New Jersey authorities questioned John Hughes Curtis, his two associates here declined to raise the veil of secrecy that surrounded their futile negotiations for return of the Lindbergh baby.

Informed last night of the finding of the child's body, Rear Admiral Guy H. Burrage, retired, said he had no statement to make and the Rev. H. Dobson-Peacock limited himself to the assertion that it was hard for him to believe the baby was dead.

Curtis communicated with his home here to say that he and Col. Lindbergh had learned of the discovery of the death of the child while they were near the New Jersey coast in connection with an effort to make contact with the supposed kidnapers.

Sometime later an automobile believed to have been occupied by Col. Lindbergh, Mr. Curtis and Edwin B. Bruce, was reported as having entered the flier's estate in Hopewell, N. J.

SERIES OF MYSTERY TRIPS

Curtis first became connected with the negotiations on March 9 when he said he was approached by a man representing himself to be a go-between for the kidnapers. Several days later he sought the aid and advice of Dean Dobson-Peacock, rector of Christ Episcopal Church here and a friend of the Morrow family. Later Admiral Burrage became the third member of the trio.

These three on March 22 visited Col. Lindbergh to present to him their "clue." Active work as a negotiator was then started by Mr. Curtis who during the following weeks made numerous flights by plane to unannounced destinations.

Curtis announced following one of his earlier trips that progress had been made and that his negotiations had been advanced to the semi-final stage. Other trips followed resulting in announcements that contact had been made with the go-betweens for the kidnapers.

LEFT FOR NEW SCENES

Finally, about two weeks ago, Curtis shifted his activities to the Norfolk area, using the yacht Marcon for almost daily trips out to sea to seek contacts with a ship believed to have the baby aboard. Lindbergh was reported to be an active participant in the negotiations.

Last week the cruises were suddenly abandoned and Curtis, presumably accompanied by Col. Lindbergh, left the Hampton Roads naval operating base for a new scene of activities. The two were said to be engaged at this new base of operations when news of the discovery of the dead baby came.

The question remained unsettled today as to why those with whom the Norfolk negotiators were dealing should have continued negotiations after the baby was dead. It was learned that the plan had been agreed upon to deliver the ransom money only after the baby had been safely delivered.

Rome Mourns for Lindberghs; Grandi Cables Sympathy

Rome, May 13 (AP)—Foreign Minister Dino Grandi, who knows Colonel Lindbergh personally, voiced his own and Italy's sorrow and horror in a cablegram to the colonel today.

He also dispatched his deepest sympathy to Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, the Lindbergh baby's grandmother.

The news visibly saddened the masses of the people of Rome when they learned of it today. Newspapers displayed the story as if it were an Italian tragedy.

Signor Grandi's cablegram read:

"I am deeply shocked at the terrible news I have just heard. I beg you and Mrs. Lindbergh to accept in this tragic hour my deepest sympathy as a friend and a father."

Chinese Express Sorrow and Horror

Shanghai, May 13 (INS)—Leaders of American, British and Chinese circles here joined today in expressing sorrow and horror over the death of the Lindbergh baby.

The sympathy of the Chinese people was expressed in the following statement by a foreign office spokesman:

"I do not wish to be quoted as giving an official message of sympathy since the Nanking Government probably will instruct the Washington charge d'affaires to convey the nation's sorrow to Col. Lindbergh, who proved himself China's friend last summer when he surveyed otherwise inaccessible flood districts in his airplane.

"This ghastly crime comes as a great shock and almost a personal loss to those who met Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh here."

Prosperity Loan Would Give Work to 75 Per Cent of Jobless, Says Shields

By JOHN J. SHIELDS

Director of Municipal Employment of the City of Boston
Written Expressly for the Boston Evening American

Municipal statistics tell the tragedy of unemployment.

The population of the city of Boston is 780,000. Of this number, 400,000 ordinarily are employed workers.

Today there are 100,000 able-bodied persons out of work in the city of Boston alone. Upon these men without income, 250,000 men, women and children depend.

JOHN J. SHIELDS

The bulk of these are handworkers. The white-collar men come next. Without technical, mechanical training they are the most difficult to place. They are willing to step out with a pick, or to work in grime and grease for any small pittance they may receive.

Moving down into the ranks of the unskilled workers, the white-collar man leaves no job for them. Economic conditions are topsy-turvy. We have poverty, suffering, the lowering of resistance to disease—out of all this we have the savage struggle of the fittest in a land with warehouses bulging with foodstuffs and banks laden with idle money.

I do not like to wave a red flag. But we must face the facts as we find them. Big business is not co-operating to make jobs for men. Instead, it is cutting down the skeleton crews of men now at work.

Mayor Curley, with vision and sympathetic understanding, has ordered that the use of labor-saving devices must cease and that hand labor be exclusively employed. Consequently, 13 contracts for city construction were issued last week with that specification.

12 MILLION A YEAR

We have had a dearth of jobs with the consequent increase of unemployment, an unpleasant combination to contemplate.

Were it not for the people of moderate circumstances who have given odd jobs to their fellow-man in distress and had it not been for the heroic and productive Give-a-Job Campaign conducted by the Boston Evening American in conjunction with this Bureau, the bad conditions would be intolerably worse.

In 1930 the Overseers of the Poor of the city of Boston expended $2,500,000 for charity relief.

In 1931 more than $7,000,000 was spent.

In 1932, owing to the exigencies of the increasingly severe conditions, we are spending at the rate of $12,000,000 a year for public charity.

No city can go along and no country can go on indefinitely with these vast expenditures for charity and with no productive enterprises to increase taxable values.

OWE DEBT TO HEARST

The first and primary obligation of the national government is to afford its people the opportunity of earning a livelihood; it is an economic necessity as well.

The advisable and meritorious program for relief of the country and the restoration of normal times has been recommended to the national government by Mr. William Randolph Hearst. It is his proposal for the Five Billion Dollar Prosperity Bond Issue. (And let me say, parenthetically that our country, notably those who have borne the suffering of the time most severely, owe to Mr. Hearst an everlasting debt of gratitude for his sympathetic consideration of their welfare.)

With such a program of public construction in force, 75 per cent of our unemployed people of Boston would be returned to work. They would become producers, bread-winners, spenders.

Cities and towns should be enabled to borrow money for public construction at reasonable rates of interest in order to unite fully with this national program.

And if prohibition were repealed and the manufacture and distribution of wines and beers made an asset instead of an economic liability, the country would be on an era of prosperity never enjoyed in its happiest days.

Loan Sure Way Back to Era of Prosperity

By CHARLES F. HURLEY
State Treasurer

"Institution by the national government of a huge public works program, financed by a bond issue, is one sure way of restoring the prosperous days enjoyed by this country prior to the present depression period.

"Such a program would mean work for millions of unemployed citizens and would create the buying power so vitally necessary for starting the wheels of industry throughout the nation."

DEMOCRATS TO STUDY HOOVER RELIEF PLAN

Washington, May 13 (AP)—Senate Democrats today turned the Hoover compromise $1,500,000,000 relief plan over to a special committee for study.

A second conference of the Democrats failed to develop absolute approval of the compromise.

Senator Robinson, Democratic leader, whose conference with President Hoover opened the way for a compromise, will be a member of the special committee. Others are Wagner of New York, Walsh of Montana, Pittman of Nevada, and Bulkley of Ohio.

As a result of last night's conference between the President and the Republicans of the Senate banking committee, Republican leaders were confident of a general agreement in their ranks on the proposal to extend federal aid to the states for unemployment relief and to finance public and private construction—by means of the Reconstruction Corporation.

BARES 'ROTTEN' STOCK DEALS

Washington, May 13 (AP)—Announcing that the Senate investigation of the New York stock market had uncovered "plenty of evidence of rotten practices," Chairman Norbeck said today the banking committee would resume its open inquiry next Thursday.

Norbeck's announcement was made after a meeting of the steering committee in charge of the investigation at which William A. Gray, committee counsel, reported the progress of his secret study of New York Stock Exchange and brokerage records.

Gray and his staff, Norbeck said, are working on 10 or 12 cases of irregularties and stock manipulation.

HOOVER FAVORS ARMY SLASH

Washington, May 13 (AP)—Representative Wood of Indiana told newspapermen today that President Hoover is strongly in favor of at least a $24,000,000 cut in army appropriations. The bill now is before the House.

Standing in the White House lobby after a conference with the chief executive, Wood said the President had been "misrepresented" and that he had just obtained permission to present Mr. Hoover's views.

2 Drive Wrong Way —Into Holdup Net

Arrested in West Roxbury by Patrolman Fred Bemis for driving the wrong way in a one-way street, Harold Williams of East st., Weymouth, and Thomas Murphy of Westbury, Long Island, N. Y., were identified today, according to police, as holdup men.

George Ayoub identified Williams as the man who three weeks ago robbed him of $100 in his store in Harrison ave. Mrs. Violet Johnson, a customer, who was robbed of $2, identified Williams, and said Murphy was the driver of the holdup car. Ayoub said Murphy formerly worked for him.

Storm Warning Out for Bay State Coast

Advisory: Northeast storm warnings continued 9:30 a. m., and lowered 4 p. m., Block Island, R. I., to Provincetown, Mass. Disturbance of considerable intensity central about one hundred miles south of Nantucket moving northeastward.

7500 New Oregon Drivers,

Salem, Ore., May 13—Some 7500 new operators have been granted right to drive automobiles since last July when Oregon's state motor vehicle licensing law went into effect.

GREAT DAY TO HANG SELF

By PROF. CHOLMONDELAY GAZZINNI,
(Head of the Department of Neurotics, University of Gazin)

I have been asked to explain what significance, if any, attaches to Friday the 13th in general and this Friday the 13th in particular, and this, with the gracious attention of my readers, I shall endeavor to do to the best of my ability, which, an inherent love of the truth compels me to admit, is small, indeed. Or what have you?

In the beginning, Friday itself became unlucky because it was named Friday and the manner of this unfortunate occurence at the very beginning I shall briefly sketch to contradict a widespread misapprehension that Robinson Crusoe's man was involved.

The fact is that the sixth day of the week was named from the Anglo-Saxon (the good old Anglo Saxon) Frigedag, the day of Friga, the wife of Odin and the Teutonic goddess of love. Odin's better half, (oh, much better!) was lucky at cards, therefore unlucky at love and thus Friday, named for her became from the start an unlucky day.

The Mohammedans claim Adam was born on Friday, that he entered Paradise on Friday, that he was expelled from Paradise on Friday, that he repented on Friday and that on Friday, he died. These were all different Fridays. They claim he is to be resurrected on a Friday, and that, of course, will be a lucky break but the Mohammedans are still waiting for this to transpire.

Then, too, there's fish. And so, Friday itself, as a basically unlucky day, is established.

Now Friday the 13th (see Tralowig's "History of the Unfortunate Digits"; volume 2, page 116) becomes a particularly unlucky day because the number 13, signifying the baker's dozen (yet not proved by personal experience) and directly following the numerical dozen, and preceding, by one as it does the number 14, which is twice the number of 7, a singularly unfortunate digit under the spell of Capricus—I say the number 13 thus becomes significantly fraught with hazard.

As to this particular Friday the 13th I am bound to conclude in advance that it will not be so dangerously fraught with ill-luck

The principal reason for this is that one of the worst of the bad omens associated with the day is walking under a ladder and as there are fewer ladders being used, because there are fewer houses being painted, because there is a depression, there will be fewer ladders raised to walk under and consequently fewer people will walk under ladders. The basic logic of this cannot be denied.

From the foregoing I have established why Friday is an unlucky day and why Friday the 13th is a particularly unlucky day and why this Friday the 13th should not be quite as unlucky as others.

If you should be contemplating such an act, it is still, nevertheless, one of the very best days of the calendar upon which to hang yourself.

FRIDAY, 13TH—WARNING

Winsome Wynne Gibson, Paramount star, gives you fair warning. When you venture out today—watch your step. Don't place too much confidence in a rabbit's foot either. That crossing of your fingers will not aid you much. That is unless you keep a close watch—for it is Friday the 13th. The only Friday the 13th in 1932. Miss Gibson has a rabbit's foot in her right hand and has fingers of her left hand crossed. She is well protected. Now let her warning guide you.

2 Seized in Plot to Steal Pastor's Child

St. Petersburg, Fla., May 13 (AP)—Two men were imprisoned today and search is being made for three other who, police say, shared in a plot to kidnap the 6-year-old daughter of Rev. David M. Gardner of St. Peaersburg, general chairman for the Southern Baptist convention.

Raid Nets 15 Tons of Fish for N. Y. Poor

New York, May 13 (AP)—Thirty thousand pounds of fish, bought for $10, were ready for distribution to New York's poor today by the Salvation Army.

The fish were seized with 1000 cases of liquor

Webster's Payroll Is Again Held Up

Webster, May 13—Although some money has been received by the town treasurer, the payroll will again he held up this week, the selectmen stated today and the money used to pay off notes due this week. The town now owes $30,000 to town employes and school teachers.

Firemen Battle Brisk Dorchester Blaze

A fire starting in the top floor at 10 Arbutus st., Dorchester, gave firemen a half-hour battle before it was subdued late yesterday. The flames spread through the two upper floors. The house was occupied by Israel Blonder, Morris Blonder and Samuel Brown. The fire was of unknown origin, according to fire officials.

WIFE DIVORCES JAIL INMATE

Because she refused to testify for him in a court case, her husband beat her, Mrs. Gilda Morelli of Somerville testified today in Middlesex Probate Court, where she was granted a divorce from Albert Morelli, who sh esaid is in jail.

Mrs. Mary H. Fuller of Sherborn was granted a divorce from Sears Fuller, son of a prominent family, on grounds of cruelty and intoxication.

She said her husband was intoxicated almost every day. She asked custody of her youngest child, and was granted it. Four other children are with Fuller's parents, and she explained she could not support more than one.

Boy Is Injured by Elevated Trailer

Francis Cooper, 4, was knocked down by a Boston Elevated trailer car as it swung around a loop in Massachusetts ave. at Arlington Heights, late yesterday.

5 Vehicles Join City-Hired Auto Stuck in Chelsea Flats

To begin with, a drive yourself car hired by the city of Boston was found abandoned there, stuck in the mud.

A tow car was called—and got stuck. Another came—and got stuck. A third tow car appeared—and got stuck.

The city of Chelsea tractor was called into play and made the first impression on the queer tangle by pulling the police car out.

Police said they were refused the identity of the hired car driver—but it's billed to the city of Boston.

MINE WRITERS CALLED 'REDS'

Washington, May 13 (AP)—Two members of the Dreiser group of writers that visited the Kentucky coal fields were described as "communists" before a Senate committee today by George M. Cheschelr, of Louisville.

Many citizens in Harlan and Bell counties are "familiar with the investigation of communist propaganda" by the Fish committee, Cheschier said.

"Communism is being frustrated in this section and the communists are bringing every agency at their command to supplement the work of the National Miners Union."

Judge Cunniff in Hospital

Judge P. Sarsfield Cunniff of the Waltham District Court underwent an operation at St. Elizabeth's Hospital for gall stones. Judge Cunniff today was reported as resting comfortably.

HOUGHTON AND DUTTON TREMONT AT BEACON

'DEATH TO KIDNAPERS,' CRY IN CONGRESS

PROMPT ACTION ON LINDBERGH TRAGEDY

Capital Offense Bills Withheld During the Hunt for Baby Are Brought Forward

Washington, May 13—Deeply shaken by the tragedy of the Lindbergh baby's end, the nation's legislators strove today to throw a barrier of stern federal law in the way of future kidnapers.

Laws to facilitate apprehension of abductors and to multiply the penalties that society may exact for the crime, were drawn when first the child was taken from his home, but were kept from enactment lest they frighten the kidnapers into committing the murder which apparently had already taken place.

With this motive gone, and in the same breath with which they joined high and low in expressing grief, the congressmen declared they would see the laws passed.

Senator Norris, who is chairman of the judiciary committee, immediately said a bill pending there to make interstate kidnaping subject to federal law would be passed.

STERNER LAWS ASKED

Other expressions of grief and sympathy included the following:

Rep. Cochran (D) of Missouri, author of a bill to make transporting of abducted persons across a state line a capital offense:

"There is no doubt now that my bill will be speedily approved. The House judiciary committee has been completely co-operative at all times, but has mutually agreed that it would be better not to press legislation until the Lindbergh case was closed. The mothers of this country will never be satisfied until they know the United States government is solidly behind the protection of their children.

Echoes of the grief felt in official Washington were heard today in the meeting of President Hoover with his cabinet. The Chief Executive's statement setting federal law agencies upon the search, was repeated to cabinet members, who one after another expressed regret.

"TERRIBLE," SAYS ADAMS

Secretary Adams said it was "a terrible tragedy," and added that though it was his understanding the naval intelligence units were not included in the President's order. Any aid that could be lent by them would be forthcoming.

Sympathy of the House for Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh was expressed by Representative Eaton, whose district includes the Lindbergh estate in New Jersey.

"It is time for good people to determine if lawlessness is to rule," he said. "What we need is a spiritual revival and determined action and a dedication among ourselves to stem the tide of crime."

Representative Seger of New Jersey said:

"Congress owes something to the country besides balancing the budget. It has to meet this challenge of lawlessness as much as it can under the federal Constitution.

"Everyone desired to aid Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh regain their little babe unharmed, but now that it has been discovered this can never be done. Let the forces of justice everywhere unleash every restraint and get the guilty parties. No one will feel right until this is done."

Lindbergh Tragedy Is a Challenge to America

The country is horror-stricken by the finding of the Lindy baby.

We had all clung to the hope it would be returned to its anxious parents alive and well, with golden curls and dancing blue eyes.

Our first emotion is of grief; we share the anguish of the suffering parents.

Is the end here? Are dastardly criminals to be allowed to remain unpunished for their act of fiendish atrocity?

The police are now unfettered. Let them go to their work of apprehension and punishment of the human vandals. Perhaps the people of this country will be as sincere and alert in their efforts to aid the cause of justice as they were in their prayers for the safe return of the innocent babe.

There are other children to be protected, other parents to be saved from anguish.

If the perpetrators of this deed are brought to bar, others of criminal intent may be deterred in the future.

The challenge to America from the fate of the Lindbergh child is to eradicate the gangster and the hoodlum.

Another lesson comes from it, aptly stated by Fr. Coughlin:

> "May the sorrow of Mr. and Mrs. Lindbergh be an incentive to every American to make this a better country for the children of the growing generation."

We express, in behalf of the people of this country, their prayers of consolation for Charles and Anne Lindbergh in their hour of great sorrow.

Shocked Continent Shares Grief of Lindberghs

(By the Associated Press)

A shocked continent today shared the sorrow of Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh and the resources of many states were pledged to a relentless hunt for the abductors and slayers of their baby.

The president of Mexico, governors of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Minnesota, Illinois among others, and hosts of other notables in public and professional life sped condoling messages to the Lindbergh home.

"What infamy!" declared Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles, former President of Mexico. "The news causes me profound grief. I have only the deepest sympathy for Col. Lindbergh and his wife and Mrs. Morrow."

"I am terribly shocked," exclaimed President Ortiz Rubio. "I send my condolences and sincere sympathy to the relatives and the people of the United States. Mexico has the deepest affection for Col. Lindbergh, nor has it forgotten the work of Ambassador Morrow."

NOT WORK OF GANGS

Chicago's hardened crime fighters received the news with shock. Frank Loesch, head of the Chicago crime commission; Col. Robert Isham Randolph, head of the Secret Six, and Alexander Jamie, its chief investigator, expressed unanimous belief the kidnaping and slaying of the child was the work of a fiend, not of gangs.

"Authorities must look for clues in the immediate vicinity of the scene of the crime," advised Loesch.

And from many others:

Governor Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania: "The Lindberghs have my deepest sympathy. The Pennsylvania State police will make every effort to the end that the kidnapers—and from all appearance the murderers—of the baby shall be captured and pay the penalty for this heinous crime."

PARALYZING SHOCK

Governor Louis L. Emerson of Illinois: "A paralyzing shock to the citizens of Illinois. Illinois stands ready to throw all its resources into efforts to see that the ends of justice are served."

Governor Floyd B. Olson of Minnesota, boyhood home of Col. Lindbergh: "A blow to me and to every citizen of Minnesota. In behalf of the State I wish to extend to him and his gallant wife our deepest sympathy.

In Minneapolis, Mrs. W. A. Butler, aunt of Col. Lindbergh, wept said she had had a feeling for several weeks the baby was dead.

"It's terrible," she said, between sobs.

In Red Lake Falls, Mrs. Eva Lindbergh Christie, half sister of the flying colonel, deeply shocked, called it "the most wanton crime in the world."

Rewards totaling $1100 were offered by two Chicagoans for the apprehension and conviction of the kidnapers and slayers. William Doyle, master in chancery in the Circuit Court, said he would pay $1000, and C. A. Coey, a business man, $100.

President of Paris Council Cables Sympathy of People

Paris, May 13 (AP)—Francois Latour, president of the Paris Municipal Council, sent the following cable today to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh

POLICE TACTICS IN LINDY HUNT ARE SCORED

Trenton, N. J., May 13 (INS)—Demands for intensive police action poured into police headquarters in Hopewell and Trenton today. A flood of telegrams descended upon Governor A. Harry Moore demanding that either the kidnapers be apprehended without delay or that action be taken to fix the responsibility to apprehend them.

Rumors even were current of a movement to precipitate a legislative investigation unless the authorities are successful in solving the crime.

In fact, the methods already employed by the police were coming in for caustic comment. Ellis H. Parker, Burlington County detective who is credited with having solved noted criminal cases, took occasion to score the authorities.

"Failure to make a thorough search of the entire community within a radius of the Lindbergh home immediately after the kidnaping is inexcusable and shameful. It is very strange that the baby could have been any length of time where it was found without having been discovered."

All England Stirred by Lindbergh Tragedy

London, May 13 (INS)—The tragic ending of the Lindbergh kidnaping was revealed to most of England at breakfast time today, when screaming headlines and elaborate picture displays of the morning papers stunned the public.

All classes were amazed and horrified. The crime was discussed excitedly. On the way to offices and factories, on street cars, buses and subways, all joined in voicing their various reactions to the tragedy.

The news was particularly shocking to England because, since the visit of Maj. Charles H. Schoeffel of the New Jersey State police, who came to Europe to trace several clues, many had been led to believe the baby was alive in the hands of its kidnapers.

Gov. Moore Thinks He Has Clue to Slayers

London, May 13 (INS)—The Daily Express today said that Governor A. Harry Moore of New Jersey told it via transatlantic telephone he thought he was on the trail of the Lindbergh murderers.

Asked if he had any clues to the identity of the kidnapers, Governor Moore replied as follows, according to the Express:

"We think we have. I think I know who did it."

Poor Little Duffer

His mother and his dad are just kids themselves.

They never harmed anyone either. They dared and did things for the world and all humans just to make this a better place to live in.

Hopewell is hope gone. The news startled and shocked and silences us and yet it is what we had feared against our prayers and the prayers of the world all the time.

I wonder how many times last night the words "poor Anne" were spoken?

I wonder how many times the words "poor little duffer" have been breathed huskily since fate revealed the tragedy?

Why could not this gruesome find have been uncovered two months ago and save the prolonged and agonized hoping of mother's heart?

What was the matter with the police cordon and the dragnet and the "sifting of every square inch of ground for clues?"

And one more question,—is it yet safe to allow some of us to run around loose without muzzles?

Every mother in America is asking these questions and looking to responsible parties for an answer.

Every one of us may also ask ourselves the same question.

And when the poor, battered remnants are buried, may this epitaph be graven on our hearts:

"Poor Little Duffer. He suffered and died because we denied him the protection that was his due."

WORLD PHONES FOR NEWS OF TRAGEDY

Trenton, N. J., May 13 (INS)—With news of the finding of the Lindbergh baby telephone messages were received here last night from all over the world.

Lieut. Walter J. Coughlin, who for 73 days has sat at the end of the telephone in the State House, acting as liaison officer between Col. Lindbergh and the press, spoke thousands of words into the telephone which for weeks has been silent.

Among the calls he received were three from London newspapers. It is estimated that these three calls alone cost more than $1000.

Japan Astounded at Murder of Baby

Tokyo, May 13 (INS)—Japan, a nation devoted to its children, was astounded today at the murder of the Lindbergh baby.

The press was quick to compare the Lindbergh murderers with Chinese bandits, whom it has frequently referred to as "baby killers."

Tokyo, informed of the tragedy by extra editions of the papers found it hard to imagine the cruelty of the American abductors of the helpless child.

Papers were unanimous in expressing their sympathy and that of the nation to Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh.

Australians Aghast at American Conditions

Sydney, Australia, May 13 (INS)—Sydney, informed of the murder of the Lindbergh baby as it went to work today, found the story difficult to believe.

The consensus was reflected in the following quotation from one paper:

"Australia simply cannot understand how people live in a country where such happenings go on unchecked."

Extra editions of all papers were published, the story even taking precedence over that of the great political battle between J. T. Lang, premier of New South Wales, and the federal Government.

Expert Says Slaying Is Work of Maniac

New York, May 13 (AP)—Assistant Chief Inspector John J. Sullivan, head of the New York Detective Bureau, expressed the belief today that the Lindbergh kidnaping was the work of a maniac.

"This apparently lets the gangsters out," commented the inspector who has worked on many kidnaping cases in New York. "To me, it looks like the work of a maniac."

TAUNTON MAN PAYS TAX TWICE TO ESCAPE JAIL

This is the 13th in a series of articles exposing the tax collection racket, a form of legalized extortion, which is fattening the pockets of constables and victimizing reputable citizens of Massachusetts.

A new wrinkle in the tax collection racket is made public today by Everett A. Williams of 12 Hope st., Taunton.

Williams received bills for two excise taxes on his automobile in 1928, one from the town of Kingston to which he had moved, and another from the city of Taunton.

Threatened with jail he was forced to pay $17.58 on the Taunton tax bill. He notified the assessors in Taunton that he held a receipt for his Kingston tax and protested the inflated bill levied by Taunton.

Later he was informed by the Taunton assessors that his tax from that city had been illegal and had been abated, but all he got back was the original tax, $3.56. The penalty charges of $14.02, levied on a tax which the city assessors found should not have been imposed, was kept by the constable and others.

JAIL THREAT

"I have been reading in the Boston Evening American about the tax racket. I think my case may be interesting. I call it plain robbery of an American citizen.

"In the fall of 1926 I went to Kingston to manage a chain store and lived there until 1931. I paid my 1926 tax in Taunton, which I claimed as my home address. Realizing that I would have to pay taxes on my car in Kingston, where it was garaged, I registered and paid my tax in Kingston. In 1928, after I had been away from Taunton two years, I received a tax bill from Taunton for $3.56 which I wrote the tax assessor about, stating that I didn't have any taxable property in that city that year. I also told him I had paid this tax on my car in Kingston for 1928, where it was garaged and had been lawfully taxed.

"When I received no reply, I figured the matter had been righted. On Aug. 25, 1930, a man walked into my store, asked if I was Everett Williams and told me he had a warrant for my arrest for a tax bill due in Taunton for 1928; that unless I paid him I would have to go to jail, and stay there until it was paid.

PAYS $14 GOUGE

"I told him I had paid my tax bill for 1928 in Kingston and had a receipt at home which I would show him, but he wouldn't listen to that. He said I must pay him the full amount and if anything was wrong I would be reimbursed by the tax collector in Taunton. Believing his story and too busy to waste more time with him along with being humiliated before my customers, I gave him the money he demanded for the tax and his services which amounted to $17.58 for a bill of $3.56 unjustly charged in the first place.

"I received a receipt from him stating I had paid under protest. When I went to the assessors in Taunton they told me they had no record of it and couldn't find any. A few days later I received a letter from one of the assessors saying my 1928 tax bill had been abated on the grounds of 'illegal tax.' This letter was signed by M. J. McAloon, an assessor.

"TRY AND GET IT"

"My next move was to write to the tax collector of Taunton, Lewis A. Hodges, and ask him for a reimbursement in full. My letter to Collector Hodges read:

"'Dear Sir:—I am in receipt of a letter from M. J. McAloon of the Board of Assessors of Taunton, stating that the 1928 personal tax illegally assessed me has been abated. The tax and charges totalled $17.58, for which I have a receipt, and I expect to be reimbursed the full amount paid. In case you don't see fit to return the same, I will be compelled to take up the matter with Mr. Long.'

"At the bottom of the letter I sent him the Taunton tax collector wrote that he would be very glad to have me take up the matter with Mr. Long and in the same letter he sent a check for $3.56, the original tax amount, as much as saying 'try and get the rest.'

"Realizing I had been 'legally' robbed and couldn't afford to spend any more money in trying to get it back, I let the matter drop. I still have the original tax bill, the receipt from the constable, the letter from Mr. McAloon, the assessor, the letter I wrote Mr. Hodges, tax collector, and the receipted tax bills from the town of Kingston, both poll and personal for 1928, to prove my statements."

(Another installment in the tax collection racket will be published in the Boston Evening American tomorrow.)

"Honest Cheating" Found at Columbia

New York, May 13 (AP)—Well anyway, it can't be said some of Columbia University's students aren't honest about their "cheating."

Forty-one per cent of the 391 who answered a questionnaire circulated by The Spectator, campus newspaper, said they "cribbed" on examinations.

vent diphtheria, enough to protect 41,000 children. Perhaps he will have in the heaven for horses as good a place as that reserved for Alexander's prancing Bucephalus, Mohammed's milk-white Alborak, or the chivalrous Rosinante.

"They also serve who only stand and wait.

The government having set aside money to provide employment, while helping judicious undertakings, ought to lend to the Pennsylvania Railroad the $55,000,000 needed to complete the electrification of its lines between New York and Washington.

Millions have already been spent on the work, which may be stopped through no fault of the Pennsylvania Railroad. Its management could not imagine what a depression was coming. The loan that the Pennsylvania requests would be useful to the whole country, employ 15,000 men more than two years, create orders for 68,000 tons of steel, many million pounds of copper.

It would involve more than one hundred electric passenger locomotives and much other equipment. Since the government has the money to lend and the Pennsylvania can give perfectly good security, why not make the loan and let the 15,000 men work? If that is not practical, what is?

You read Wednesday that archeologists from Rome have discovered what was left of Sodom and Gomorrah after the big fire.

More interesting is yesterday's announcement that Prof. Roy Watterman of the University of Michigan has discovered in Mesopotamia what he thinks is the Zikurkat, better known to us as the Tower of Babel.

Located in the ancient city of Akshak, it is a mound of earth about 50 feet high and 300 feet in diameter, with a core of sun-dried bricks, 40 feet square, by way of reinforcement.

It might have been, when finished, about one-third the height of Gov. Al Smith's Empire State Building. The workers were not disciplined, by the infliction of different languages, because there was real danger of their reaching Heaven, since that abode, as we know now, must be several billions of miles above the top of their tower. They were disciplined for their presumption, innocent things, belief that Heaven was just above the clouds.

The Republican party went wet in Ohio, as you know, and now that grand old machine is trying to go wet in New York. The Republican county committee was expected last night to advocate a plank in the national platform demanding repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

However, the country will know more about beer and such things when it hears next November from the millions of voters throughout the country that never saw New York.

Two Americans, who once thought they were rich and now know they are not, were asking each other:

Gen. William Mitchell, who was in the group, said:

"The best is leave your money in the United States. The next best is to put it in France, best organized country in the world.

"The French power to resist any attack from the outside, power to suppress any insurrection on the inside. They are powerful in the air, powerful on land, powerful at sea, powerful under the water, and especially powerful in their gigantic gold reserves. They have a great empire in Africa, to which they can send their surplus production, that's the country that is solid."

Very able nation, the French. We know it to the extent of four billions.

Yesterday London cut the bank rate to 2½ per cent, cheapest money with one exception in 23 years. How do our best minds explain a revival of British prosperity, accompanied by England's departure from the gold basis? That seems like going to Heaven after turning atheist.

Siam has left the gold basis also. What is good enough for England is good enough for her.

Here in the United States we are faithful to gold, the Stars and Stripes, the Declaration of Independence and, full of fighting courage, we sink deeper in the mud.

Our great financial minds appear to have been strangely innocent. An able Swede in the match business came here, borrowed $150,000,000, without showing security, saying "you cannot imagine how rich I am." The bankers said "here's the money."

James L. Rosenberg, an able American lawyer, shows that Krueger gathered here $150,000,000 of which 95 per cent went to Europe, American finance making no effort to keep track of the foreign business, never asking where the money went.

American business men can testify that if they tried to borrow one thousandth part of $150,000,000 they would have to show their birth certificate, wife's wedding ring and every detail of their business. Even then they would get only half of what they needed.

DOHERTY, SICK 6 YEARS, BACK

New York, May 13 (AP)—Henry L. Doherty, head of Cities Service Company, was welcomed back to the business world today, after six years of ill health, at a luncheon given by prominent industrial leaders. It was Mr. Doherty's 62d birthday.

The veteran oil and utility man in a naddress that surveyed current economic problems, discussed business "picnics and panics," taxation and money and government regulation of business, expressing the opinion that although no cure for current problems could be expected "from any magic wand," he did believe "hard work and common sense are bound to win."

Paris, May 13 (INS)—Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, American social leader, was stricken with paralysis here today.

Mrs. Jacques Balsan, the former Consuelo Vanderbilt, daughter of Mrs. Belmont by her first marriage, rushed to her mother's bedside with her husband.

It was announced that her two sons, William K. and Harold Vanderbilt, would leave New York for Paris aboard the Majestic sailing tonight.

Mrs. Belmont has maintained a home in Paris for many years. She also maintains residences at Eze-sur-mer and at Loiret in France.

SALLY AND HOOT TO PATCH UP

Los Angeles, May 13 (AP)—Sally Eilers, film actress, and Hoot Gibson, star of western motion pictures, have about decided their separation is all a mistake.

The actress said she would meet with her actor-husband "to talk things over" within a few days.

"We'll reach a decision, but we don't want to be hasty about it," she said.

The actress admitted they had had differences, and Gibson, in a statement, blamed their professional careers for their unhappiness.

Roosevelt Victor by 26,000 in Penn.

Harrisburg, Pa., May 13 (AP)—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt won the Pennsylvania Democratic Presidential primary preference election by 26,400 votes over Alfred E. Smith.

The complete state-wide totals guaranteed Roosevelt a minimum of eight convention votes from the Pennsylvania delegation. For the 68 votes of district delegates, the Roosevelt and Smith leaders continued to make widely divergent claims.

ROOSEVELT AND WIFE HOME

James Roosevelt, son of the New York governor, and Mrs. Roosevelt, have returned from their California trip. Both declared that they had enjoyed their campaigning experience there.

Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt left Boston the day of the Massachusetts primary in which his father, Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt suffered a setback and Al Smith put the first chock under.

James Roosevelt made a half dozen speeches in California for the Roosevelt slate, speaking in San Francisco, Los Angeles and other centers of population.

COUNTERFEITER SOUGHT HERE

A number of counterfeit $10 and $20 bills have been passed throughout the city by a smartly-dressed man about 40, police revealed today.

Business men were warned to watch for the man or the counterfeit bills. The $10 bills bear the first three numbers B277 while the first four symbols on the $20 bills are B920.

SKUNK SHOT AT HARVARD

Presence Is Still Felt at Gore Hall

The skunk was shot and killed before it made its way beyond the entrance, but not before it had time to retaliate for a previous bullet.

The skunk was sighted at the Gore hall entrance. A 22 calibre rifle was protruded from an upstairs window, a sight was taken and two shots hit the skunk.

This brought the retaliation. When somebody raised the armament from 22 to 38 calibre and fired a heavier rifle the skunk admitted defeat. Students found it dead when they cautiously approached the remains a half hour later.

A general lack of knowledge as to what became of the body was professed today.

Fisherman's "Hall of Fame" Established

Hot Springs, Ark., May 13—A fisherman's "Hall of Fame" has been established here. A room has been set aside for the trophies of the men who catch a fish weighing five pounds or more in the lakes. It is called the Ananias Room.

TRAIN HITS CAR, WOMAN KILLED

Bangor, Me., May 13—Mrs. Robert Downes, 46, of Stetson, was killed and her daughter Pearl, 22, was injured in a grade crossing crash at Etna Station, west of Bangor. They were struck by the Flying Yankee at a crossing late yesterday.

The car was hurled 75 feet, breaking off a crossing signal, and the locomotive was derailed by the wreckage. The train was delayed more than an hour and a half. Miss Downes was thrown clear of the wreckage.

CHILD ROUTS KIDNAPER

Little Barbara LeClair of 38 Bolton st., Lynn, was believed to have frustrated an attempt to abduct her five-year-old sister, Priscilla, into the woods off Sanborn st., last night. Barbara attacked the man with her fists and feet, kicking and scratching him until he dropped Priscilla and fled.

A short time before he is believed to have made another attempt to carry away five-year-old M - McGarvey, daughter of Mrs. Catherine McGarvey of 12 Gage st., Lynn. This time Mary's loud screams and cries frightened him.

The Making of an American
JOHN NANCE GARNER
By Elsie Robinson

WHAT do you need to know about a man before you vote for him?

Do you only need to know his political party . . . his political acts? That is usually all that the public does know about the man for whom it votes. That is all that the Machine thinks it necessary to tell. But is that enough?

Is that enough at a time like this when men are no longer merely playing politics . . . when they are faced by a desperate need for bread and work, when they are fighting for the right to live?

It is not enough!

It is not enough now for a man to represent a party or to stand for that party's policies. The time has come when a man must offer and possess certain qualities in himself . . . when he must represent himself and stand for his own principles. And he must have established certain principles to stand for.

For forty years men have voted for John Nance Garner.

WHAT DID HE VOTE FOR, HIMSELF?

• • •

CHAPTER FIVE
HE WOULD NEVER FORGET

A GIRL stands in the doorway of a rough, five-room cottage. The spring wind, swooping over three hundred miles of chaparral, ruffles her brown hair, darkens her gray eyes to violet, tints her cheeks and smiling mouth to a deeper rose.

A baby boy bounces in her arms, clutches at the flying hair. She laughs, kisses the little fist.

From the room behind her comes the smell of baking bread—the starchy fragrance of freshly ironed linen. Beside the doorway spreads a patch of spaded earth, spring onions and radishes pricking through the black soil in a wavering line. The girl swoops down to pull a weed.

It is all very simple. You would not make a picture of that. But to the gangling young man striding up the path, it is the loveliest picture on earth.

The young man is 27 and a judge. But you'd never know it. His gray striped pants are baggy. They look more like a cowboy's chaps than pants. His coat rides up toward one ear—his collar toward another. And from somewhere northeast of his necktie, the round, red face of the youthful Judge John Nance Garner beams proudly upon his Missis and heir apparent. He should worry about haberdashery with a sight like that to greet him!

Haberdashery and all other frills had been the least of his troubles in those busy years. Ten years before he had been a boy, ploughing. A lanky, clumsy, penniless boy drudging through the grim round of ranch chores—facing life with no assets save grit and grin, two calloused fists and a notion in his head. A notion about people and power—

Yet three years after, before he was 21, he had passed his bar exams, had persuaded the court to let him become a practicing lawyer, had had himself elected county attorney!

His friends, the saloon keepers, had helped put him in that place. And his first official act had been to turn around and put them in theirs! Yet they liked him and voted for him still!

HE'S UNBEATABLE

He was to go on performing official acts like that to the end of his days. And those he performed them ON were to continue to like him.

You can't lick a guy like that!

And now he was 27—a successful lawyer, editor, owner of bank stock and real estate, and county judge, a husband and a father.

"He had traveled fast, he had traveled far"—what had the traveling done to him? Had it spoiled him as it had spoiled thousands of enterprising youngsters before him?

He was an ambitious boy. Had ambition hardened into ruthlessness?

He was daring. Had daring racketeered into lawlessness?

He was shrewd? Had shrewdness slimed into slickness?

Had he become that thing we call a politician and ceased to be that thing we call A Man . . . forgetting the common touch and the simple standards he had known as a boy?

The answer lay there—in that little five-room cottage . . . in the garden he spaded after working hours . . . lay, even, in that rumpled coat and these baggy pants. He had not changed.

He had made his own fight without fear or favor. He had stayed his own man—without compromise. But he had put up a whale of a battle! And now he was preparing to put up another. That old desire for—out!—was still with him. He was going to go to Congress!

Now, how does a young man get to go to Congress?

There have been ways. The least said about them the better. John Nance Garner's way was unique and startling and entirely in keeping with his amazing tradition.

There were mountainous difficulties in the way. In the first place, no one suspected his intention. But what of that? No one had ever suspected his intentions—but he had always succeeded in them nevertheless. He was used to playing a lone hand. Indeed he liked nothing better than bluffing through on a couple of deuces—

So once more he entered the game with what seemed to be a highly innocuous hand.

11 VOTES IN POCKET

(Maybe you don't care for politics—? But listen in, anyway. You can learn about go-getting from this)

For many years old William Henry Crain had represented the Seventh Congressional District of Texas. This district included Uvalde where young Garner had lived. In 1896 old William died in Washington and some one had to be elected to fill his place.

So down to Corpus Christi went Judge Jack—as delegate to the convention. And in his pocket he carried 10 proxies, in adition to his own vote. Which, if you know voting tactics, is the equivalent of one good machine gun.

Conventions were social and highly popular affairs in that frontier section. No one was in a hurry to get things settled. There was a tie. For three days they wrangled . . and otherwise convened and consulted. On the third day they got around to settling things.

Judge James B. Wells was the local political potentate. He favored the nomination of Rudolph Kleberg, of Cuero. He had not anticipated any opposition and his amazement grew as one ballot after another—up to 70—proved fruitless! His amazement turned to indignation when he found that a comparatively unknown young whippersnapper from Uvalde, by name, John Nance Garner, was gumming up the program by holding the deciding vote.

Something must be done. Something was. Garner did it! He said that he would swing the votes to Kleberg if, in return, he were given the chairmanship of the district congressional campaign committee.

That, too, was typical.

Young Garner's requests always seemed so simple—so natural. How could one suspect this unpretentious, grinning, red-faced youth of guile? One couldn't. Pompous overlords granted what he asked with amiable condescension. Discovered, all too late, that they had helped dig a pit for their own pomposity!

CARVING A DISTRICT

So Garner got that district chairmanship. A sop—thought Judge James Wells. But young Jack—duly grateful—knew it for what it was . . . his first step toward his own congressional election.

Now before you can be a congressman you must have a district. But suppose you have no district—suppose the other fellows have beaten you to it, monopolized all the available geography. Then, if you're one kind of a person, you give up. But if you're a Garner kind of a person, you do something quite different—

You make a district for yourself!

The district in which Uvalde was located was as large as the State of New York and well organized. No look in there. But suppose he cut that district in two—and preempted the new district for his own?

All right—he will and does get himself elected to the State legislature. A wide-eyed but resolute young wife clinging to one arm, a crowing baby tossed over the other shoulder, away they went to Austin.

It was in 1898. He was 30 years old. He was skinny and red and peeling, for he's been riding range again—campaigning this time on a raw-boned nag—over barbed wire fences. He wore a long tailed, black, jimswinger coat, a flowing tie and a derby. The derby was too big. Only his ears kept it from covering his Adam's apple.

Mrs. Garner felt something was wrong. She didn't know exactly what but she suspected it was the hat. So she went out and bought him a soft-brimmed felt and took the derby away. He looked better then. But not much. But what of it? He was headed toward Congress—not the Floradora chorus.

Now how to get that district he was after? No progress the first term. Then in 1900 there was a new shuffle and a lucky deal. The census showed that the state was entitled to more representatives.

THEN INTO CONGRESS

His chance had come. He ran again for the Legislature and was elected. Straightway he managed to have himself elected chairman of the redistricting committee of the House. Before he left that chair he had persuaded the House to adopt his plan for a new 15th district which included Uvalde—and which would incidentally supply young John Nance Garner with a congressional spring board.

Then back again to Uvalde—to ride 400 miles of cactus-covered, chuck-holed wilderness, in a rough and tumble, back-jouncing, neck blistering campaign that made history, even in Texas.

You know the end of that story. Then sent him to Congress that fall of 1903. They have sent him every year since.

How did he feel as he closed the door of that little five room cottage as the three of them walked down the garden path, past the roses and petunias and marigolds, out into the dusty road that was to wind on and on to Washington through the shadowy years ahead?

Sad? Glad? Surely very proud. He had wanted—out. He was out at last, on the trail of his heart's desire. But there was a part of him that would never leave Uvalde.

There was a part of him that would always plough the wild land in the spring—and brand the calves—and roof the clay-chinked cabins.

There was a part of him that would never forget the taste of sweat and the sting of tears—and the sound of a simple prayer.

He was going away from them all—away from those poor, plain people of whom he was a part—into the seats of the mighty. But he would never forget the hunger of the poor or their helplessness. He had been part of them too long. Always, whatever happened their memory would come first. Always he would fight for them.

So they went down the path along the road . . . touching friendly hands . . . answering friendly farewells . . . and came to the little station.

To the west the sun flared and was gone.

In the dusk a lark called—and was still.

John Nance Garner turned and looked back—back over the miles and the years—

He was very quiet. His mouth smiled—something deep within him shone. But there were tears in his eyes.

RUSSELL GIVES TIME

Arthur H. Russell, vice-president of the New Haven road, is a familiar figure in the State House corridors. For months he has been devoting considerable of his time to the bill before the Legislature concerning the trucking of freight by motor vehicles. And in view of the fact that he receives a salary of $37,000 a year, it is pretty valuable time.

TIES?—ASK HERTER

Rep. Christian Herter of the Back Bay appears to have a hobby on neckties. The observants say he never wears the same tie twice, but that may be stretching it a bit.

HIS VOICE BOOMS

Rep. Carl Woekel, of Methuen has been nicknamed Rep. "Vocal" by some of his colleagues. He is equipped with the loudest and deepest voice in the Legislature.

RESEARCH REVEALS ALL-BRAN RICH IN HEALTH-ELEMENTS

Helps Correct Constipation with "Bulk" and Vitamin B; Also Has Iron

Recent scientific research shows that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN contains two things needed to overcome temporary and recurring constipation. It has "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and Vitamin B to tone the intestinal tract.

These two important food-elements promote regular habits, and help do away with the headaches, loss of appetite and energy, so often the result of constipation.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is mild in action—much like that of lettuce. Inside the body, it forms a soft mass, which gently clears the intestines of wastes. Special cooking processes make ALL-BRAN finer, softer, more palatable.

Isn't this pleasant "cereal way" far more healthful than using pills and drugs—so often habit-forming?

Just eat two tablespoonfuls of Kellogg's daily—enough for most types of constipation. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Besides, ALL-BRAN brings your body twice as much blood-building iron as an equal amount by weight of beef liver.

Equally tasty as a cereal with milk or cream, or used in cooking. Recipes on the red-and-green package. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

GREATEST MAN HUNT IN HISTORY UNDER WAY FOR KIDNAPERS

BRUTALITY OF BABY SLAYERS STIRS ENTIRE NATION

Teeth and Toes Means by Which Identification of Child Is Made

Because of the advanced stage of decomposition which had erased any evidences of contusion or external hemorrhage, it was impossible for the medical examiner to give an opinion as to the nature of the instrument of death.

Two of the secret means of identification previously withheld by the police and members of the family were used to establish positively that the baby was Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr.

One of these was a slight overlapping of the toes. The other was the presence of eight teeth.

The report of the autopsy was gruesome in detail. In addition to the lower left leg, other parts of the body were missing, due presumably to decomposition, hastened by exposure. The left hand and right forearm were gone, as were some abdominal organs. The conclusion reached by the physician, however, was without equivocation. He said.

"Diagnosis of the cause of death is a fractured skull, due to external violence."

Shreds of Baby Clothing and Strands of Hair Furnish Identity

Clinging to the decomposed body was the w[illegible] flannel that had kept the body warm that night of March 1 when his nurse tucked him into his crib. These shreds of baby clothing were identified [illegible] enough; these and the matted, curly, blond hair.

"The baby was struck a fearful blow on the head," Dr. Mitchell said. "The skull was fractured clear across the top. There is a hole over the right ear. The lower left leg is missing."

One of the strange, weird jests of the horror that for 73 days had turned the Sourland estate of the Lindberghs into a tragic heartbreak house was the discovery of the body virtually at its doorstep.

Running through the brush-grown land and passing within 75 feet of the baby's burial place is a telephone wire. It was strung hurriedly to carry to the world news of the baby hunt and the excited messages of hope, of new clues, of imminent discoveries passed hardly more than whisper distance from the object of the hunt.

Betty Gow, the baby's nurse, was taken to Trenton and there, at the morgue of Coroner Swayze, viewed the remains of the child she had "tucked in" in its crib on the night of March 1. She sobbed.

She said she was "quite certain" the body was that of her little charge.

The spot where the body was found is about four miles from the house of sorrow on Sourland Mountain and a scant mile and a half from the village of Hopewell.

Mt. Rose is a little hamlet consisting of a half dozen houses and a little general store on the road connecting Princeton with Hopewell.

Hopewell lies between the Lindbergh home and the place where the body was found. The gravel road leading from the Sourland Mountain house crosses the paved highway which is also the main street of Hopewell, and this same road leads into Mt. Rose, but is seldom traveled.

Location of Body Indicates Kidnapers Fled Through Heart of Hopewell

Fleeing from the Lindbergh home with the baby, the kidnapers could have gone into Mount Rose along that road, turning at Mount Rose onto the road leading to Princeton, which is about seven miles away.

The only other manner by which they could have reached Mount Rose without taking a winding road that would have caused them to double their tracks for more than a mile was directly through Hopewell.

The fact that the body was found off the Princeton road and between Mount Rose and Hopewell indicated, police said, that the kidnapers, in their flight, drove directly through Hopewell.

From Mount Rose in clear weather, the Lindbergh home is visible. The road between are bordered with underbrush and woodlands. These woods were not combed by the State troopers immediately after kidnaping, being considered "too far from home."

The emergency telephone lines which carried news of the progress of the search for the baby from the Lindbergh home to the outside world for more than two months, were strung at one point, about 75 feet from where the body of the child lay partially concealed.

Death Spot Free of Foliage at Time That Telephone Wires Were Strung

How the linesmen, rigging the wires which were to carry conjecture, hope and despair to a world waiting upon every step of the search, could have failed to notice the body is a mystery.

At the time the wires were strung there was no foliage. In another month underbrush leaves would have so concealed the hiding place of the tiny victim that it probably never would have been found for it would have been covered with fallen leaves in the autumn.

But fate sent William Allen, the Negro truck driver, into the wood 75 yards from the road at 3:15 o'clock yesterday afternoon and the tragic news of the "whereabouts" of the "nation's baby" was flashed throughout the world a short time later.

Allen and Orville Wilson drove on their truckload of lumber into Hopewell and notified Chief Wolf, who, in turn, flashed the word to the State police quarters on the Lindbergh estate.

Crowds Gather In Hopewell Streets Enraged at Brutality of Kidnapers

Lights blazed in the house throughout the night. Downstairs talking in whispers were intimate friends and relatives. A member of the Morrow family was rushed down from Englewood. Col. and Mrs. Henry Breckenridge, and others close to the family were there. Mrs. Morrow was understood to be comforting her daughter.

In a fever of hysteria, crowds assembled on the street corners, shocked and enraged.

Hopewell Man Tells How He Found Body in Woods

Hopewell, N. J., May 13.—The [illegible] account of how he discovered the body of the Lindbergh baby, was given [illegible] by William Allen:

"After I got into the woods, I went under a branch and looked down. I saw a skull sticking out of the dirt, which seemed to have been kicked up. I thought I saw a baby, with its foot sticking out of the ground.

"I called Williams (Orville Williams, his companion) and he came into the woods. I said, 'I think it's a baby.'

"He said: 'Well, what are you going to do about it.'

"I said: 'I guess I'll report it to Charley Williamson (one of the two members of Hopewell's police force).

"We stopped at Hopewell and after looking around for Charley found him in the barber shop.

"I said: 'Could you talk to me for a couple of minutes.' He said: "'Sure,' he'd talk to me for five if I wanted to.

"Williamson went and got the State police. He took me back to the truck and after I delivered the load of blocks I had on the truck I took him to the road where we found the baby.

"The baby was about 45 feet back from the road. After I showed it to Charley he went and got some State policemen and I drove my truck back hôme and went to dinner.

"After I got home, Williamson and some plainclothesmen came and got me and took me to Lindberghs' house. When I got there they asked me a lot of questions, like what time I had seen the baby and where I had seen it and all about it.

"Then they brought me back home.

"I just hope they get the man that did it. Nothing would be too bad to go to him."

Allen, who lives in a plain little house with his wife and five children, said he didn't want no reward for finding the baby"; he just wanted to keep his job.

The little body, when found, was almost covered by a blossoming shrub, known as a Julian tulip, which in another 10 days would have concealed it.

Allen and Wilson, with Thomas Kraft and Livingstone Titus, who had helped them uncover the body, were taken to the Lindbergh home and closely questioned.

At midnight, neither reporters nor sympathetic neighbors were allowed within two miles of the Lindbergh home. Police guards again were set up.

Lindy Away at Time of Discovery; Notified by Police, He Speeds Home

Meanwhile the pathetic remains of the little son of the famous flyer were in an undertaking parlor in Trenton, where the autopsy was performed.

Col. Schwartzkopf, [illegible] of [illegible] midnight issued the following bulletin:

"A preliminary telephone report from the county physician indicates that a number of positively identifying characteristics have been discovered in the body found today which would identify it as being the body of the Lindbergh baby.

"Betty Gow has positively identified the garments found on the baby discovered today as being the garments in which the Lindbergh baby was clothed on the night of the kidnaping.

"The sleeping suit was not on the body, but the two shirts on the body have been positively identified by Betty Gow.

"Mrs. Morrow and Mrs. Lindbergh were at the Hopewell house when it became known that the body found today was that of the Lindbergh child. Col. Lindbergh was immediately communicated with and is on his way to Hopewell now."

The statement added:

"The body was found on the left side of the road going from Mount Rose to Hopewell. More than 20 additional troopers were immediately ordered to duty upon the discovery of the facts which have come to life today. Additional men are being detailed as needed.

"Information concerning the gang referred to (a reference to previous intimation that arrests of a gang under surveillance might be expected) is now being checked and such parts of it as will not interfere with the apprehension of the gang will be revealed in a later bulletin."

Robert Thayer, [illegible] Lindbergh's secretary, and Mrs. Thayer were among those of the [illegible] who rushed to the home when the news was learned.

Atty.-Gen. William A. Stevens, who, in the absence of a prosecutor for Hunterdon County, in which the Lindbergh home lies, has direct supervision of criminal investigation of the kidnaping, sent Asst.-Atty.-Gen. Joseph A. Lanigan to the Lindbergh home, at Col. Schwartzkopf's request, to act in an advisory capacity.

Mr. Stevens, however, said that as the body was found in Mercer County, the seat of which is in Trenton, that county would probably have charge of the investigation and prosecution of the murder.

Col. Schwartzkopf, [illegible] during all of the trying 72 days because of his fear that any attempt to trap the criminals might result in harm to the baby, promised that a relentless manhunt will not end until the slayers have paid with their lives for the murder of the baby.

GET SLAYERS, SAYS MOORE

Jersey City, N. J., May [illegible]—Every attempt will be made [illegible] to find the [illegible] of the Lindbergh baby," Governor A. Harry Moore declared [illegible] today.

"This is a great shock to the whole country," the governor said.

The governor disclosed that Col. H. Norman Schwartzkopf, State [illegible] [illegible] the new[illegible] [illegible]. His office received [illegible] number of telephone calls [illegible] [illegible] inquiring for news on the case.

Sleeping Suit Torn From Baby's Body

Hopewell, N. J., May 13—The sleeping suit was missing when the body of the Lindbergh baby was found. The body was clad only in an undershirt and a flannel band with a curiously embroidered scallop recognized as garments the baby wore when it was stolen.

Perhaps it was the sleeping suit, torn from the lifeless body of the infant, which the kidnapers dangled before the eyes of the eager "Jafsie" Condon and the eyes of the heart-broken father, in their plot to get the ransom money, a plot which netted them $50,000 turned over by Lindbergh and tossed over a cemetery wall by "Jafsie."

WHAT INHUMAN TYPE OF MAN COULD DO THIS MURDER?

By WIN BROOKS

All night I have been thinking about the [illegible] person who could do it.

And about the kind of civilization [illegible] the kind of person who could do it.

I thought at first:

"No man did that. No man did it. It must have been a beast—some kind of beast. Perhaps it was a gorilla. It certainly was not a human being.

Then I thought:

"There are no gorillas here. There are all types of human beings. There are all kinds of men. There are all kinds of women. It was done. And a man or a woman did it.

There was a picture in front of me. Picture of a baby smiling. Blue eyes. Flax[illegible] clipped short. I thought of my own three children, and of my neighbor's two. I thought of holding a baby in my arms and crushing its head with a blow and crushing its head with another blow. I shuddered. And I thought:

"No, I'm wrong. No man did that. No woman did it."

BEREFT OF GOD

Then I thought of human vultures plucking and tearing [illegible] [illegible] greed [illegible] out a fortune from the bared breast of an anguished man. Piercing his heart with their beaks. Spewing birds of prey, gorged on tragedy and the despairing hopes of a grief-ridden young mother who is soon to become a mother again.

And I thought:

"No, I was right before. There is that kind of man and there is that kind of woman, nursed in hell and fattened in filth, bereft of God in this strange civilization of ours. They walk this same earth with us and they are given to torture and to violence and to hate, and Christ and little children are no more to them than green slime on a swamp pool."

But I knew then that it was a [illegible] [illegible] was a woman [illegible].

The search is over. And I wondered if the police would say in an official bulletin, "We are still seeking Harry Fleischer, known kidnaper.' And I thought: 'Well, they are not seeking the baby, anyway."

They sought in New York.

They searched in Paris.

They hunted in London, and in Berlin and in Vancouver and in Montreal and Mexico City and in half the world over.

THEIR OWN BACKYARD

And I thought:

"That was shameful police work."

But, I said, the police were handicapped. They were afraid to move—afraid they might get [illegible].

Then I thought:

"Shouldn't they have guessed the baby was dead? Shouldn't they have known the baby was there in the hills close to home? Didn't they realize the significance of the failure of anyone, anywhere, to have seen this baby after he was stolen? Shouldn't they have realized that the only kidnaper who used a ladder was mad? Shouldn't they have attached at least a little importance to the precedent of the Baby Coughlin case?

I [illegible].

DOUBLE-CROSSED FAITH

I thought, then, of a baby's diet broadcast to the world by a mother who prayed that a fiend would follow it because the baby was ill. I thought of the pleas that followed. And of the thousands upon thousands of words of hope that followed this prayer and these pleas out of a big house on a hilltop and over wires that were strung almost directly above a shallow grave where a little baby lay all those hours and days and weeks—in death, a dumb mockery of faith.

And I thought of Norfolk and of Marthas Vineyard, and of the bewildered appeal:

"What is the matter? Have you double-crossed me?"

"What is the matter? Have you double crossed me?"

Have you double crossed the faith of the world?"

I thought of a stuffed "teddy."

I thought, "That is sob stuff. Why do you write that?"

And then I thought of a folded play-yard.

And I thought:

"Oh, God, If I were only You!"

It was not sacrilege. It was only a simple prayer.

* * *

Crime Against Every Mother, Says Davis

Landsdale, Pa., May 13.—Senator James J. Davis last night declared the slaying of the Lindbergh baby is "a most heinous crime, not only against Mrs. Lindbergh but against every mother in America."

Science Devises Plan for You to Compare Your Own Opinion With That of Others

Do you know psychologists have proved that even quiet, demure people often think too highly of themselves? Prof. D. A. Laird, director of the Colgate University Psychological Laboratory, explains why this is so in an enlightening article in next Sunday's American Weekly. He discusses the topic thoroughly, including studies of this subject made by other famous psychologists.

The article, you'll find, is interesting—particularly the test chart appearing with it. Take the opportunity it offers to judge your own qualities. Use the chart to compare your own appraisal of yourself with the way others rate your faults and follies. It's a fine chance to get a good picture of your ability so that you may see yourself just as others see you!

'TAX 1,700,000 MORE,' PLEA BY SMOOT

Washington, May 13 (AP)—Speedy enactment of the billion-dollar revenue-raising bill on a non partisan basis was asked of the Senate today by Chairman Smoot of the finance committee.

"It is a measure for the protection and preservation of your government and my government," he said in opening debate on the bill. "It is above party lines and distinctions. Let us take the all-important step toward economic recovery."

Smoot emphasized that it was vitally necessary to broaden the base of income taxes to include 1,700,000 more individuals in order to meet the shortage in the nation's revenue, a shrinkage which he set at 50 per cent since 1930. But with incomes dropping, he declared it was necessary to go [illegible] for tax refunds.

He reluctantly shunted aside the sales tax because of its decisive defeat in the House and called upon business to share $[illegible] of the budget-balancing burden in selected excise and miscellaneous taxes.

Smoot made no mention of the merits of the four tariff items about which a real row is brewing. He supported these import duties in committee and advocated the copper tax.

World Asks What U. S. Will Do?

Miss Margaret Lane, one of the star feature writers of the London Daily Express and at present a guest writer for International News Service, was in London at the time the Lindbergh baby was kidnaped. In the following article she tells how the news of the kidnaping was received abroad and what the rest of the world is thinking about the crime.

By MARGARET LANE

New York, May 13 (INS)—No crime has ever so shocked the world as the vicious murder of the Lindbergh baby. From the moment of the kidnaping, the case [illegible] the most interesting [illegible] in two hemispheres.

The news was flashed by radio to ships at sea; passengers in mid-Atlantic were notified by the news. London streets were posted with placards bearing the baby's name in letters a foot high; the child's picture became familiar in Paris, Berlin, Vienna, and the grief of America's most famous pair went home to the hearts of parents in all the countries of the world.

Now that the terrible ending to the story is made known, there is not a foreign capital, not a mid-European hamlet that has not shuddered at the news. To European minds, it is a tale too horrible to believe, the sort of crime that only lives in nightmares. For never before has a nation-loved child been taken from its bed and murdered for money—the old horrors of criminal history look pale beside America's contribution to lawlessness and vice.

THE WORLD IS WAITING TO SEE WHAT THIS COUNTRY WILL DO. It is probably the only murder for which every feeling mind believes revenge, rather than justice, should be the penalty. Whatever men put that little child to death must now be in a death-sweat of terror in their hiding place, for there is not a man or woman, in this country or in any other, who would not gladly lend a hand to their destruction.

If this horror is not avenged as bitterly as it was committed, the American people will have to face the rest of the world with a hideous scar on their conscience. If finding the criminals depended on the public, on the ordinary people who have children and sheltered homes, they would rise—one would swear—to a man.

England in particular has [illegible] to believe that such a [illegible] crime could be committed in [illegible].

It is just as if our Princess Elizabeth had been kidnaped, [illegible] in the golden [illegible] little girl who is the most important child in England, a [illegible] parallel to the golden-haired [illegible] boy who was the only child of America's Prince of Wales.

If such a thing had happened in England the people would rise and take the law into their own hands. But America is a vast country, her problems and her size are almost too great for one people to master.

It is she who lacks [illegible] nothing will ennoble or disgrace her in the eyes of other countries who have already heard too much of her spectacular criminals.

Stricken and bereaved almost as bitterly as she, with not a home the world over that is not haunted by this wanton murder of a child, the countries across both oceans have turned their eyes on her now.

Lindy, Jr., Listed in British Who's Who

New York, May 13 (AP)—Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., was considered such an important personage that his name was listed in the British "Who's Who."

The 1931 edition of the book added to its roster his name and that of Marie Rose, daughter of the Duke and Duchess of York, born two months after Charles, Jr.

MOVE TO OUST SCHWARZKOPF

Frank J. Harrold, chief of Atlantic county detectives, said today he and John Ferguson, president of the County Detectives' Association, had decided to propose to the association that it ask Gov. Moore to demand the resignation of Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the state police, as an aftermath of the Lindbergh case.

"We do not claim neglect or anything but incompetency," Harrold said. "We regard this was shown by the fact the Lindbergh child's body was found in close proximity to the Lindbergh home, where any sort of efficient search should have disclosed it long ago.

"Instead of making a thorough search of the vicinity much time and money were spent on futile trips."

'SLAYERS' GOT HOAX RANSOM

New York, May 13 (INS)—Inhuman as the unutterably shocking kidnap-murder of the Lindbergh baby is, it appeared today that perhaps the world's most heartless [illegible] was perpetrated on the grief-bowed parents by the men who extorted [illegible] hoax ransom from [illegible] Condon, New York [illegible] lecturer.

[illegible] they were the real kidnapers, they were also the murderers of the child and were trafficking in the body of the dead with full knowledge of their savage deed.

Dr. Condon believed they were the authentic abductors. So did Col. Charles A. Lindbergh. What led them to this faith was never fully told.

The men knew the secret code given in the ransom note kept inviolate from the public until today. They also furnished a "token" never described but convincing to Lindbergh and "Jafsie."

If, as was reported, the "token" was the sleeping suit the baby wore when it was stolen, there is strengthened suspicion those who obtained the ransom money were the criminals who kidnaped the child, slew it and then callously wrung gold from the hope-filled duped hearts of the parents.

Washington, May 13 (AP)—The House coinage committee agreed unanimously today to recommend that President Hoover call an international conference to [illegible] silver and monetary exchanges.

The committee's preliminary report will be submitted to the House tomorrow.

No. Haven Saddened by News of Tragedy

North Haven, Me., May 13—News of the tragedy of the Lindbergh baby cast depression on residents of this little community which has known the late Senator Dwight W. Morrow and Mrs. Morrow and the parents of the Lindbergh child as "home folks."

BABY FINDERS IN SPOTLIGHT

Hopewell, N. J., May 13 (AP)—Two men whose discovery gave to the world the fate of the kidnaped Lindbergh baby reported for work as usual today at the home of W. [illegible]

They were [illegible] when they entered the [illegible] at Mi[illegible] Corner, three miles from Hopewell, to find the back yard a [illegible] for newsreel cameras and sound reproducing apparatus.

William Allen of Trenton, a [illegible] Negro of 4[illegible], [illegible] to see the body at the edge of the wood, posed in his work clothes for pictures and [illegible]. He repeated his version of the finding of the body three or four times and then he finished with the [illegible] grinding, he said.

"I don't know any more to say than that."

He said when Allen made the discovery he called "Come on over here." When they were sure they found the body of a baby they drove to Hopewell to inform police.

Argentine Papers Print Indignant Editorials

Buenos Aires, Argentina, May 13 (AP)—Indignant editorials were on the front pages of many newspapers today in columns parallel to those telling of the discovery of the Lindbergh baby.

"All the peoples of the world join in believing and hoping that sooner or later those who committed this deed will be punished," said La Nacion.

STOREWORKERS AT PARTY

Twelve hundred employes of Houghton & Dutton Co. made merry last night at the Mutual Relief Association entertainment and dance at the Copley Plaza.

The relief association, made up of employes, were the guests of the store management in appreciation for the co-operation of the employes in the recent Houghton Day sale.

Ex-Mayor John F. Fitzgerald thanked Anthony W. A[illegible], vice-president and general manager of Houghton & Dutton, for inviting him to attend. The former mayor sang "Sweet Adeline."

Entertainers were Schuster and [illegible], [illegible] and the [illegible]

Among the guests were [illegible] Benecke of New York, V. C. Brown, store director; Arthur L. [illegible], managing director of the Copley Plaza and a director of Houghton & Dutton; Adrial Bird, director; William [illegible], director; Mrs. Anthony W. A[illegible]mann, wife of the vice-president and general manager of Houghton & Dutton's, and James W[illegible], a manager at the store.

The committee in charge, directed by Henry Cochran, included Edward H. Hunvald, Harold A[illegible], Arthur Morrison, Miss Dolly MacDonald, Miss Sohpie Bieber, Bernard F. Sheridan, Theodore [illegible], Theodora O'Connor and Sam Lowenberg.

DUPED BY DIAPER PINS

charge of the investigation ever since the baby was kidnaped.

Prosecutor Marshall, who [illegible] have jurisdiction because the body was found in Mercer County, although the kidnaping occurred in Hunterdon County, indicated that an [illegible] might be expected, though it might not be for several days.

BELIEVE CONTACT MADE

He said that no one [illegible] that Dr. John F. Condon, who [illegible] ransom, and John Hughes Curtis, [illegible] Norfolk [illegible] the baby, were [illegible] Curtis and Dr. Condon made statements last night and were examined [illegible]

Marshall would not say what theory was favored by police as to motive for the brutal crime, but it was known authorities had under consideration one fact that would indicate that Dr. Condon and Curtis had been in actual contact with the kidnapers.

The baby's sleeping suit was missing when the body was found.

[illegible] after the kidnaping [illegible] the child was wearing a white flannel sleeping suit, a garment that would cover him from neck to feet. Under it he wore a [illegible] flannel shirt his nurse had made and put on him late that afternoon to protect his chest and keep him from catching cold.

On the body yesterday there was no sleeping suit, only the soled and tattered remnants of the little shirt and a flannel band around the waist.

LINDBERGH CONVINCED

It has been reported several times that [illegible] and the Norfolk intermediaries turned over to the Lindberghs an article of clothing [illegible] convinced them contact had been established with the actual kidnapers.

And so the theory had to be considered that the kidnapers, believed by many officials to have been crazed, killed their tiny victim almost immediately, stripped off the sleeping suit, and after the body had been cast aside in the hidden hollow where it was found, set about obtaining ransom for a child they knew could never be returned to its parents alive.

Trenton, N. J., May 13—Another of the theories upon which the police seeking to solve the baby murder mystery were working today was that one of the shacks in the Sourland Mountain region may have been the hiding place of the kidnaper with the baby [illegible]

ANOTHER THEORY

[illegible] Lindbergh that he would hear from the kidnapers after [illegible] had elapsed.

The [illegible] Colonel Lindbergh would not cause an alarm to be sent out.

However, they became further [illegible] when the alarm was sounded and police began to ring over the roads in the vicinity, the kidnapers, realizing their plans had gone awry, became alarmed [illegible] to get rid of the child. In their need to [illegible] from their hiding place, they became panic stricken, killed the child and tossed the body into the woods along the roadside.

"JAFSIE" HAD DIAPER PINS

Two other bits of evidence supposedly establishing the authenticity of the alleged kidnaping group that dealt with Dr. Condon also are in the possession of Col. Lindbergh, Dr. Condon is said to have told the prosecutor. They are two diaper pins. A diaper which the baby wore when it was kidnaped is missing.

Dr. Condon told Prosecutor Marshall, it is understood, that early in the negotiations with the kidnapers the diaper pins were sent to him to prove the men he was dealing with had actually stolen the baby. In the final negotiations, when the $50,000 ransom money was turned over, the baby's sleeping suit was given as the final bit of evidence of the kidnapers' identity.

Two undershirts found on the body bore the same maker's name and number as a stock of similar [illegible] in the baby's wardrobe at the Lindbergh home. One of the [illegible] had been cut down to a smaller [illegible] piece that was cut off.

Miss Betty Gow, the baby's nurse, [illegible] matched with the [illegible] found on the body and was identified. Further, Miss Gow had sewed a hem around the bottom of the [illegible] thread and [illegible] identical thread at the Lindbergh home last night.

Convict in Cage on Long Trip to Prison

Joliet, Ill., May 13 (AP)—Maybe Tino Gonzales, convicted burglar, will be comfortable on his long ride from here to Huntsville, Tex., but there were those who had their doubts.

W. R. Crane, a special agent from Huntsville, put him in a cage four by five feet, loaded it onto a truck and started for home. The Texas authorities want him to serve a 15-year sentence.

Phone Calls Pour Into American

No news in memory has overwhelmed the switchboard at Liberty 4000 as did the flash on the Lindbergh baby slaying last night.

Within a short time after the public had heard the tragic news, calls began to pour into the Boston Evening American switchboard which normally is operated at that evening hour by two girls.

Frances Vaughn and Gerda Pynn, who had been relieved and gone home, were hastily recalled by taxicab and joined with Mrs. Josephine Chandler and Rita O'Halloran in answering feverish inquiries, which, at one period, completely tied up 40 trunk lines continually for 30 minutes.

During this rush not a call could be sent out through the board from the offices of the Boston Evening American, the Boston Daily Record or the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Lindy Often Passed Within Few Feet of Son's Body

Hopewell, N. J., May 13 (AP)—From Mt. Rose, near where the Lindbergh child was slain, one can gaze over wild woods in which foxes prowl and see the white Sourland estate of the flier, about five miles away.

The thicket near the roadside where the tiny body was tossed by the murderers, never was touched by the widespread search, in which hundreds of State troopers beat the brush about Hopewell and the Lindbergh estate. Apparently the isolated spot was considered too far away to yiel dany clew.

Mount Rose, a hamlet of a dozen houses clustering about a general store, is about a mile and a half from Hopewell on the road to Princeton.

Col. Lindbergh drove over the road frequently in his journeys during the hunt for the child. Each time he traveled it he passed within a few feet of his son's body without knowing it.

BOSTON HONORS INVENTOR OF TELEGRAPH

State and city today honored Samuel F. B. Morse, native of Charlestown, who invented the telegraph 100 years ago [illegible].

Charlestown school [illegible] honored him with a wreath [illegible] on the tablet which [illegible] his birthplace and with exercises in the Clarence R. Edwards [illegible].

Boys of the [illegible] class ticked off a message across the [illegible] of the [illegible] "What hath God wrought?" which was the message Morse used in demonstrating to the world that his invention was practical.

GRANDDAUGHTER HERE

The inventor's granddaughter, Miss Leila Livingstone Morse of New York, arriving here from Washington, visited the Western Union main office on Congress st. and inspected the simplex machines which have been [illegible] out of her grandfather's invention.

She was later received by Gov. Ely and Mayor Curley and tonight will be guest of honor at an observance in Faneuil Hall with two other grandchildren, [illegible] Peter Morse and Miss Clara Morse.

Morse was born April 27, 1791, at what is now [illegible] Main st., Charlestown. While on a ship at sea May 11, 1832, he conceived the idea of the telegraph.

DENIED RECOGNITION

It was 11 years before he received recognition. At first America and England rejected his plans, but as if by an afterthought as Congress was expiring in March, 1843, and was voted him to construct a line from Washington to Baltimore. It was over [illegible] that he sent the message [illegible] around the world.

Canada's Banking Record Challenge to Congress

Congress dare not adjourn without going to the relief of depositors in closed banks and providing all bank depositors with better protection for the future.

Senator Glass of Virginia has given the Senate these astounding statistics regarding bank failures in Canada and the United States.

> "During the last 65 years there have been but 26 bank failures in Canada, and not one during this period of frightly depression.
>
> "Since 1923 we have had nearly 5000 bank failures in the United States, while they have had but one bank failure in Canada. The significant part of it is not the number of bank failures so much as the volume of losses that occur.
> "In all the history of Canadian banking, the total volume of losses to depositors of failed banks was $13,500,000, whereas the Comptroller of the Currency informed your committee that the losses to depositors of failed banks in this country in the last two years aggregated two and a half billions of dollars."

In the face of this indictment of the banking system of the United States, Congress will be guilty of a cowardly betrayal of the public interest if it adjourns without remedial legislation that will bring the American banking system up to the level of security of the Canadian banking system.

This is the purpose of measures proposed in the House by Congressman Steagall of Alabama, and in the Senate by Senator Glass of Virginia.

These measures are entitled to the legislative right of way until they can be debated and enacted into law.

Banking lobbies that seek to obstruct the enactment of these measures are enemies of the public interest, and the public will be justified in putting the blame on the Congress if the measures opposed by these lobbyists are defeated.

DEATH TAKES JUDGE DEWEY

Former Judge Henry S. Dewey of Municipal Court died in the Boston State Hospital in Dorchester, where he has been confined since 1912, last night.

The former judge's commitment to the hospital followed a bitter court battle in which he conducted his own defense.

It was decided that Dewey was suffering from paranoia and that it would be unsafe for him to remain at large. Instances of his eccentricity, one in particular when he arrived at the courthouse dressed in the full regalia of a brigadier general of the Massachusetts [illegible] were cited to strengthen the charges of insanity.

After his confinement numerous attempts were made by friends to have another examination of Dewey, and Dewey himself circulated letters proclaiming he had been "railroaded."

He ran for mayor in Boston in 1905 and arguments which arose during the mayoral campaign resulted in his filing a $76,450,000 suit against the Good Government Assn., which he claimed had slandered him in 1909.

Girl Attacker Guilty in Honolulu Trial

[illegible], May 13 (AP)—Joseph Young was convicted by a Circuit Court jury last night of assault [illegible] a young Chinese girl. The jurors deliberated three hours and recommended to Judge Cristy that he decline to impose capital [illegible] which was made the maximum penalty for the offense by a recent legislative session.

Sentence is to be passed Monday.

HINTS WITNESS INTIMIDATED

[illegible] that he believed witnesses had been intimidated, Judge Frank Adlow in municipal court today continued for two months trial of William Russo, charged with assault with intent to kill.

Russo was arrested following the taxicab shooting last July of Miss Josephine Pinna of Brooklyn, N. Y., in Bowdoin sq. At the time Miss Pinna named Russo as her assailant. Since then she has disappeared.

In court today police produced Ralph [illegible], the cab driver who [illegible] couldn't remember that he had identified Russo as the man who did the shooting.

"Why are you so reluctant to testify today? Have you been intimidated?" asked Judge Adlow.

Judge Adlow then told Sergt. Hugh Sullivan he would continue [illegible] for two months to give the police an opportunity to find Miss Pinna. Russo was released in bail of [illegible].

Hitler Leader in Reichstag Arrested

Berlin, May 13 (AP)—Gregor Strasser, Adolf Hitler's right-hand man in the Reichstag, was arrested today in connection with the battle [illegible] the Reichstag which followed refusal of four National Socialists to obey an expulsion order.

AKRON REACHES SAN FRANCISCO

Sunnyvale, Cal., May 13 (AP)—The Navy dirigible Akron was to moor at its Pacific Coast base today after a transcontinental flight that extended two days longer than estimated and cost two lives.

Here at the southern tip of San Francisco Bay a red light on a 77-foot temporary mooring mast marked the goal for which it set out from Lakehurst, N. J., May 8.

Two officers and 24 members of the crew arrived early by airplane from San Diego to lend their experience in mooring operations, guarding against a repetition of the Camp Kearny tragedy, in which two were killed.

Married Teacher Problem Up to Ford

Detroit, May 13 (AP)—Henry Ford, as a member of the Dearborn school board, has been asked to decide whether the board shall discharge its married women school teachers.

A special meeting has been called for Monday and a registered letter has been sent Mr. Ford asking him to attend.

Flags Half-Staff at Lindy Starting Field

St. Louis, May 13 (INS)—Flags were at half staff at Lambert-Municipal airport today out of respect for the sorrow of Col. Lindbergh, who made his headquarters at Lambert Field when he was just a mail pilot.

Five years ago yesterday Lindy took off from Lambert Field in the "Spirit of St. Louis" for New York, where a week later he was to hop off for Paris and fame and fortune.

Body of Infant in Harbor

The body of an infant, about a days old, was found in the harbor today near Driscoll's Landing.

2 BOATS ASHORE ON HULL ROCKS

A coast guard patrol boat and the fishing sloop Mary G. 2nd, of South Boston, were blown ashore at Point Allerton, Hull, today as the government craft tried to save the other.

Capt. Alfred Stewart, Frank Twomey and Malcolm Herring, all of South Boston, were aboard the fishing craft last night when the engine became disabled. The boat was tossed shoreward in a northeast gale and incoming tide.

Patrol boat 152 from the East Boston base met a similar fate when her crew sought to throw a line aboard the Mary and pull her away from the rocks.

THIS IS LIFE

RUSSIAN MISSES IT BY A CENTURY OR MORE WITH WINGED IDEA

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

PROF ROGERS

THERE ARE TIMES when one imagines that the Russian mind [illegible] a mediaeval mind, that it dates from somewhere round 1400 or even 1500 and that it is ignorant of all the scientific inventions and discoveries of the past 500 years. The country that attempted to make an instantaneous leap from the opening of the industrial revolution in 1750 to its fruition in 1950 at one fell swoop, might be expected to ignore history, even the history of science, and try to turn backward to the childhood of the modern mind.

There is in Russia, the press dispatches tell us, an artist, one Vladimir Tatlin, who is getting himself ready to put on wings and "fly" in the air. Whether he has completely ignored, or is completely ignorant of the story of the Wright Brothers and Lilienthal and Santos-Dumont, or whether he simply has no historical sense is not established. The point is that in his fancy he wants to get back to the Middle Ages and fly, quite out of his own head.

History a Mystery to Him

[illegible] is to develop a bird-like apparatus, using his own [illegible] and feet as motive power, which he calls an air [illegible]. His flying machine is small enough to be operated by a small man or woman and looks like a white bird. It has not yet been flown but it looks pretty, like a real work of art. The fact that Comrade Vladimir was previously a "constructivist" artist does not give the skeptical and foreign critic any more faith in his contraption.

Comrade Vladimir belongs back in the middle ages [illegible] century Roger Bacon dreamed of a thin copper [illegible] filled with etherial air liquid or fire which would float on [illegible] the atmosphere. In the 15th century old Leonardo da Vinci, perhaps the greatest genius whom history records, [illegible] wings that man could tie to himself and flap [illegible] of birds. Both arm and leg muscles would have to be used, he thought.

"Da Vinci and the hundreds of others who came after him failed to [illegible] that man's muscles are not nearly as strong in relation to his body weight as are those of a bird. If a pigeon weighed [illegible] pounds it would be strong enough to exert a full horsepower. If a sparrow weighed 49 pounds it could do the same. Yet at best a man who weighs 150 pounds can exert a [illegible] for only three or four seconds. When he must sustain his efforts, he can exert no more than an eighth of this amount. Nothing could more clearly demonstrate the impossibility of expecting a man to fly by flapping his arms."

The above quotation, taken from that admirable and amusing history of aviation "Sky High" by Hodgins and Magoun (Little Brown & Co.) would seem to demonstrate beyond cavil that Comrade Vladimir Tatlin is really living in the mediaeval world.

Others Have Tried It

Then at the beginning of the 17th century, a Portuguese friar, De Gusman, "applied for a patent on a chariot which was to be a paper kite in the form of a bird and was to be equipped with tubes through which the wind would pass to fill a sail and propel it. It was to carry bellows which would function when the wind was [illegible]. To this marvel of propulsion there was added a lifting device equally gifted. The electric attraction of pieces of amber was relied on for the lift, with the help of magnets placed on top of the whole magnificent contrivance. Perhaps there has never been a finer example of a machine that would lift itself by its bootstraps."

Then there was a French locksmith named Besnier, "who built himself an apparatus of two wooden bars to rest upon his shoulders. At the end of these bars he placed muslin wings. He designed the bars to be pulled up and down by his arms and legs, and arranged the wings so that they opened flat on the down stroke and folded vertically on the upstroke." With this apparatus he actually jumped from a garret and landed safely. Then he soared over the roof of a cottage. Then he sold his apparatus and retired.

In 1742 the Marquis of Bacqueville attached large paddle-shaped wings to his hands and feet and advertised that he would fly across the river Seine. He leaped nobly, faltered, and fell, not into the river but on the deck of a washerwoman's barge and broke his leg.

Comrade Vladimir obviously belongs back with Roger Bacon and the Marquis, anywhere from 1250 to 1750, in the days when science was idealistic and notional and a priori, instead of empirical and a posteriori and dull and pragmatic. No intelligent person in America or England or Western Europe would brood five minutes over such preposterous notions as have occupied Comrade Vladimir and his disciples now for several years in his monastary tower of the New Virgin near Moscow.

Enterprise Peculiarly Russian

All of which makes me suspect that the Russian is merely a mediaeval in store clothes and a celluloid collar. No one else would have dreamed of trying to put the late Comrade Marx's pretty theories into practice, jumping (even according to Marx's own formulae) some thousand years in the process. No one else would dream of going back to the political economy of the Dark Ages under the pretence that it is something brand new and forward-looking and especially idealistic. No one else would ever have dreamed of substituting, for autocracy of people who were at least gentlefolk an autocracy of muckers and arrivistes and theorists and people-on-the-make. No one else, in short, would ever have dreamed of experimenting with either a communism or a foot-power flying machine work. The two experiments show an ignorance of fundamental mechanics, human and material, of which even a Kentucky cracker wouldn't be guilty.

Progress, as every school-boy knows, isn't a regimented and consistent affair. The countries of the world do not march "company front" before the reviewing stand of Old Father Time. Our Russian sympathizers forget that fact. They seem to believe that the Russian experiment means, somehow, an advance on our best knowledge of 1932. They forget that it may mean only an advance on the best knowledge of the year 1250, or 1550, or even 1750. A few centuries do not matter. The most heartening and enlivening news from Russia of late is that the Russians seem to be bending every nerve to bring their experiment up to modern times—say to about 1850. Give them another century or two and mediaevalism may begin to catch up!

Enthralling Story of Modern Married Life

Bill and Nevis Give a Lively Housewarming in Their New City Apartment

"Girls, gather up your husbands and keep 'em close to the home pasture, for there's dirty work at the cross-roads," said Della.

How the Story Started

It was taken for granted that Bill Lancaster would enter his father's lead pipe manufacturing business after college. However following his marriage to Nevis Hammond he leaves the little Pennsylvania town where he was raised and goes to New York to sell bonds.

"You ran my bath" "Thanks, darling. Where are the bath salts? I had 'em in a glass jar. I reek of anchovies."

LESS EXTRAVAGANT

"Bill, you didn't! Sure you didn't get hold of the starch or the bicarb?" She was in the bathroom. A heavy odor from the tub reassured her. The tub was full of rose-colored water. Nevis giggled resignedly. "Bill you blessed idiot—all my precious salts. Fluff gave 'em to me—she brought them from Paris. They cost about a million dollars an ounce."

"Well how did I know how much to use. A teaspoonful?" asked Bill, aggrieved. "Anyway, let's be extravagant. Use a lot more," he advised cheerfully.

[illegible] dressed new dinner [illegible] head. She looked, Bill told her, picking her up in his arms, a bundle of toweling and damp fragrance like a kid. She ordered distractedly.

"Bill, put me down—you'll get all over talcum. For heaven's sake, go out and crack some ice and make yourself useful and let me get dressed. They'll be here any minute now."

BILL SEEKS THE SHAKER

"Where did you put the shaker? Darling, I can't find the silver cocktail glasses! Did you get out the Scotch from my Gladstone? Where are the highball glasses? Can't find the napkins? Shall I use this silver tray Aunt Margaret gave us—the damned thing weighs a ton. Oh, Nevis, come here a minute, will you?"

"You look—like something much too precious to belong to me," he told her.

"Bill, you'll ruin my make-up!" He kissed her [illegible]

"Lord, I'm thirsty."

"Nevis, what a darling apartment—"

"No, it's a Pennell—"

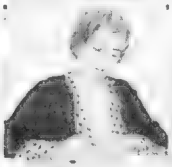
At the Star Meeting

With the Candid Camera

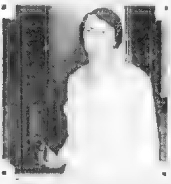
By CANDID CAMERA

I was taken into the session of a fraternal order yesterday at Tremont Temple, where the George Washington Bi-Centennial session is being held by the Grand Chapter of Massachusetts Order of the Eastern Star. I photographed the people that are shown here.

Miss Florence C. Williams, Worthy Matron of the Melissa F. Cook Chapter of Boston, was checking up on members present. She is the assistant to the Grand Warder.



Mrs. Maude M. Coburn, Past Matron of Pigunssette Chapter of Watertown, is a member of the credential committee. You have to show her your credentials before you are admitted.



Mrs. Grace F. MacPhee, Grand Warder and Past Matron of Palestine Chapter of Newtonville, takes care that nobody but members pass through the doors at the Tremont Temple.

WRIT PREVENTS REMOVAL OF RECORDS

More Than $6,000,000 in N. E. Money Invested in the Concern, Attorney Alleges

A temporary injunction restraining the Boston Montana Mines Co. and its officers from removing books and records from the state pending the outcome of court action was issued today by Supreme Court Justice Pierce.

Before Judge Pierce, Atty. George H. Lucey argued for a writ of mandamus to permit his clients, William J. Baker of Arlington and Charles S. Cummings of Boston, who hold 83,000 shares in the company, to examine its books to ascertain its financial condition.

Lucey said that more than $6,000,000 of New England money has been invested in the company by more than 4000 persons and his clients now believe the company has been grossly mismanaged and its assets wasted.

FEAR QUIZ ON RECENT VOTES

Several hundred non-resident Boston city employes are wondering if their jobs are safe today as the result of questionnaires sent out yesterday requesting them to state where they voted this year and last year.

Those living outside Boston proper see in the questionnaire a possibility they will be the first to be dropped from the city payroll if it becomes necessary to conserve the municipal funds to meet the ever increasing demands for poor and unemployment relief.

Old-timers remember that in 1908 and 1909 the late Mayor George A. Hibbard dropped 800 city employes because the city finances did not warrant their further employment. There is nothing, they contend, in the civil service laws to prevent Mayor Curley from doing the same thing.

Mayor Curley stated last night that the questionnaire circulated was "the usual procedure."

Under the law only police and firemen are required to live in the city and are obliged to obtain special permission to leave the city for a night's trip. Other city employes must live in the city for six months previous to their appointment but there is no law to prevent them from moving out the day after they get their jobs.

Newton May Ban Trucking at Night

Yielding to the pleas of residents the Newton Board of Aldermen next Monday evening will consider an ordinance prohibiting heavy trucking on Brookline, Vine and Oak Hill sts. between the hours of 7 p. m. and 7 a. m.

The passage of heavy sand and gravel trucks through those streets early in the morning and late in the evening cause great annoyance and residents complained at a recent hearing on the petition of the Highland Sand & Gravel Co. for a renewal of its permit.

Use of Sun Rays Has Brought About Miraculous Cures

—By DR. R. S. COPELAND

NOT so many years ago the curative power of the sun's rays on certain cases of tuberculosis was accidentally discovered and this led to exhaustive study and research regarding the action of the rays on the human body.

Dr. Copeland

We all know what happens when a portion of the body is exposed to the rays of the sun. The skin will at first turn red and if the exposure is continued sunburn will result.

Ordinarily sunburn by the sun's rays may not be dangerous but in the therapeutic application of the sun ray with one of the sun ray lamps great care should be exercised. General exposure to the sun ray should be avoided as dangerous effects may follow which would prevent the application of subsequent treatments.

If a portion of the body—at first one leg and foot, perhaps—is exposed to the direct rays from 10 to 15 minutes daily, a pigmentation commonly known as tan will appear. If on the following days other small areas of the body are exposed, gradually the skin will take on a brown tint. Usually a marked improvement of the general health follows such treatment.

Sunlight not only acts upon the skin, but stimulates the blood vessels, and thus sends the blood in a more forceful stream through the body. The blood becomes richer and the red blood cells increase in number. The ability to resist infection is increased, and the immunizing properties of the system are strengthened. Weak muscles become stronger under the sun's rays and the internal organs perform their work with greater ease.

Tuberculosis and rickets are the two diseases in which sun rays have made almost miraculous cures. Rickets is a deficiency disease, brought on not only by improper food, but also by living in dark and unsanitary homes. During the winter months or seasons, when the weather is cold and damp, many cases of rickets develop.

Answers to Health Queries

C. C. E. B. Q.—How much should a girl of 16, 5 ft. 5 in. tall, weigh, also a girl of 16, 5 ft. 9 in. tall?

A.—They should weigh respectively about 124 and 123 pounds. This is about the average weight for people of this age and height as determined by examination of a large number of persons.

Novel Steak of Alpine Variety

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Friday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

WHO IS THIS coming up the walk, loaded like the pony express? None less than our Betty, all excited about a marvelous sale of canned goods she's discovered. Among them big jars of fat, juicy pickles. And what could be nicer right now, to help pep up some of the common, everyday dishes that the family is beginning to be a bit sniffy about. Take for instance our common garden variety of hamburg steak. Some sliced sweet pickles added to a can of condensed tomato soup and the other usual ingredients will make a yummy meat loaf, good hot or cold and it's a dandy sandwich filling.

ALPINE STEAK

- 2 lbs. round steak, ground
- 1 can tomato soup
- 2 cups cracker crumbs
- 1 tsp. salt
- ¼ tsp. pepper
- ½ tsp. poultry dressing
- 1 tbsp. minced onion
- 1 cup sweet pickles, thinly sliced.

Combine meat, soup, cracker crumbs, and seasonings. Mix thoroughly. Fold in pickles. Press into a greased loaf tin and bake in a moderate oven (350 deg. F.) for one hour or until done. This loaf is excellent hot or cold and will keep several days in a refrigerator.

And this hamburg combination is titled

CASSEROLE ITALIENNE

- 2 cups cooked spaghetti or macaroni
- 1 can tomato soup
- 1 tbsp. butter
- 1 cup grated cheese
- 1 medium onion, finely chopped
- 1 cup sweet pickles, chopped
- 1 cup cooked meat, ground

Combine spaghetti or macaroni with tomato soup. Add onion which has been cooked in butter until brown. Add ½ cup sweet pickles and ½ cup cheese. Mix thoroughly. Place in buttered casserole. Spread with ground meat. Cover with remaining cheese and pickles. Place in a moderate oven (375 deg. F.) 20 minutes or until brown.

Daily True Story

Fate Takes a Hand

ANOTHONY DERRICK was palpably nervous. His fellow clerks in the firm of Martens & Co. would certainly have noticed it if they had watched him closely.

Things had been going badly for Derrick; to begin with he did not have a munificent salary and he had been gambling in a small way to try to make a little extra money. They needed that money at home, for though he and his wife and the two small children lived as economically as they could there was always worry over money. That was chiefly because of the illness of the younger child. Sheila had been the picture of health until the infantile paralysis scourge struck her down.

TOYED WITH IDLE

And now on top of all his anxiety came a rumor that men were to be laid off. That gave him a cold chill. What in the world would he do? There were thousands of workers like him looking for jobs. Just ordinary conscientious clerks without the spark that makes for initiative and business success.

If he only had a few thousand dollars how differently he would feel. Little by little he toyed with the thought of getting those few thousands of getting them in the very office where he worked of hidding them away. If he were caught at least Sheila would be cared for. Somehow it never occurred to him that benefits from stolen money bring their own misery with them.

He had lain awake many a night planning out just how he would do it. He knew the combination of the office safe and he knew that usually on Friday nights there were from five to seven thousand dollars placed there. He would pretend that he had to work late and—he would make use of his knowledge and abstract the bills. No one would know—certainly no one would suspect him. He would put the cash away and perhaps in a few years he would take it out a little at a time.

And this was Friday. The clock struck six, one by one his fellow toilers closed their books, left their desks and went home. A few saw him sitting there working. "Don't stay all night," they called.

Derrick dropped his head on his folded arms on the desk top, supine, unable to move. And then he became conscious of a noise, the soft opening of the door that led to the hall. He heard a whispered O. K. and saw from the dark corner where he sat two lithe figures tiptoeing into the room.

Evidently they knew the lay of the land, for they wasted no time but settled in front of the safe and started to jimmy open the door.

All at once he was himself again, an honest man. He had only one thought now and that was to catch the [illegible] red handed. He thought fast. If he shouted for help they would escape and he had no gun. The robbers were finding the door more difficult than they had supposed.

He dropped to all fours, removed his shoes and crept along the wall to the door. When he reached it his heart was pounding, his fingers shook as he slipped back the catch, fearful that even that small sound would betray him.

The cop who stood at the corner grabbed him by the shoulder as he started to speak, convinced he was dealing with a lunatic.

Derrick chattered his story and the cop drew out his gun and went back with him.

When they reached the door of the office the cop turned. "You stay out here," he ordered.

"Give me your club," said Derrick. "I'm with you; I'll switch on the light."

SLIPPED INSIDE

They opened the door and slipped inside.

Suddenly the cop's voice rose: "Now, men, guard the door—hey you," he yelled, "hands up"—and he kicked aside the screen and covered the two amazed robbers.

"Just in time," said the cop, cheerily. "Hey, you," he spoke to Derrick, "blow this whistle out the window, will you?"

The morning papers contained a vivid story of the trapping of two of the most notorious gangsters in the city. And the afternoon editions told in detail further developments, with the pictures of the shattered safe, with diagrams and sketches of Derrick's sleuth-like trek to the street.

They told too of a crisp thousand dollar bill handed to the clerk by his employers, of words of praise for his work and his keen interest in remaining at his desk to finish what most other clerks would have left until the following day.

But one scene they missed: the moment when Derrick, handing the precious bill to his wife, crept to the bedside of his crippled daughter and, kneeling there with tears in his eyes gave thanks that he was again Captain of his own Soul.

Woman Guest Served First

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

At a small informal dinner in one's home where the host carves and the hostess serves the vegetables, is the hostess or the woman guest served first? It has always seemed such an uncourteous thing for the hostess to be served first at a dinner of this type. Am I wrong?

WINDSOR.

No, you are thoroughly right. The woman guest of honor should by all means be served first whether the service at table is of this "English type of service," or the service by waitress.

Greetings

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

On arriving at school every morning I am greeted by some of the boy students with a hearty "Good morning." Some of my girl friends told me that I should always greet a gentleman first. Tell me, please, if this is true, and if so, is it true at all times?

C. C.

Although true it is that "strictly speaking" the girl or woman greets a boy or man first, it is just as true that what usually happens is that they greet each other simultaneously. This is as it is and should be between friends.

Books—And a Number of Things

By CHARLES HANSON TOWNE

There have been many attempts to make science interesting to the layman, but the most fascinating book I have read in a long time is that by Sir J. Arthur Thomson, called "Riddles of Science," published by Liveright.

Things that you and I may not have thought much about, or rather may have thought about deeply and arrived at no satisfactory conclusion, are here [illegible] and clarified. Have you ever wondered, for instance, if animals are afraid? Sir Arthur says they are, but the emotion of fear is not confined to birds and mammals. It is part of the higher forms of the instinct of self-preservation, and we fancy that it is always some anticipation of impending pain. He says that he once saw a young antelope in a South African paddock being punished by an insulted sonic [illegible]. It rushed about dripping with blood, seeking escape. There was fear writ large in its eyes. No doubt each of these creatures has its own fear, but fear there is.

And he tells of a Highland pony slouching half asleep in the middle of a road, terrified at the approach of one of the first automobiles. Suddenly the animal became quite stiff and rigid. Sir Arthur says he had not known before how true the phrase "petrified with fear" could be. Two of them got out of the car to lead the pony aside, but they could not make it move. There was no question of obstinacy; the creature's legs were as if it had died and stiffened, and in the end they had to lift the pony off the road as if it were a hobby horse.

We must remember that, prodigious as it is, science is still relatively young. It is only some two thousand years since Aristotle laid the foundations of biology, and, except for a few exceptional inquirers like Galen, there were few who built on them until the scientific renaissance, which we may associate with the date 1543, when Copernicus published his book on the heliocentric revolution of the earth and other planets and Vesalius returned to Aristotelian observation in his book on the structure of the human body.

It is a commonplace nowadays, but it took a long time for naturalists to realize that all the problems of anatomy and physiology and the other sub-sciences are all in [illegible] illustrated at our very doors, though every one must admit that the sea has a manifold [illegible] suggestiveness unparalleled on land, and that there are lessons from the tropics that cannot be readily learned in temperate countries.

* * *

Why do we laugh and why do we cry? Sir Arthur tells us. Why does our hair turn gray? "When man's hair becomes gradually gray while still growing and being cut, the silvering means that the new growth at the base of the hair is developed with little or no pigment. But when man's hair turns white in a night it has been shown that a marked and sudden development of gas bubbles serves to mask the pigment which is still present." And he goes on to say how various [illegible] treated all these simple things.

"Why do we dream?" It is a common [illegible] people dream most [illegible] as [illegible] [illegible]. We [illegible] a quiet [illegible] we [illegible] constant [illegible] of many kinds, we are ceasing to be content with [illegible] we are [illegible] having our bodies tired out with [illegible] were, we have less natural sleep, and hence we dream much [illegible]. The most primitive dreams are probably reawakenings of very early experiences, such as those of [illegible] perhaps even of ante[illegible].

Sir Arthur tells of a careful [illegible] who told him of a young [illegible] with its eyes shut in [illegible] to [illegible] which in its sleep went through hunting motions with its jaws [illegible] premature barks [illegible] facial expressions as if it were on the hunt. But it had never crept about and it was sleeping [illegible] Many a sleeping dog has hunting dreams but these are doubtless reminiscences of its own experiences; in the case of the very young puppy there was perhaps a re-awakening of racial predisposition forming part of the primary unconscious.

* * *

Is telepathy a fact and what lies behind clairvoyance? Also, how may crystal gazing be explained? Is it instinct, or thought, which animals know? You will get an [illegible] to the old theory that cats have nine lives and you will learn from this book why it is that we sometimes walk in a circle when we are lost in a wood or in a fog.

[illegible] those solemn bridge games where no one peeps. It's much more fun to play a friendly little game like this. Well, here's where friendship ceases." "They had all the cards."

One winces, reading these bromides. For how often one has said them oneself. There is the lady who always asks, "What's trumps?" and the gentleman who begins a funny story just as the [illegible] dummy who, after laying her hand down, blandly inquires if she should have mentioned her spades. Yes, Mr. [illegible] and [illegible] met them all, but [illegible] knows how better than we [illegible] them. The sketches by D'Alton Valentine are most amusing.

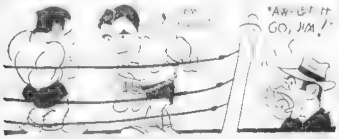
FANNING

With GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Boom! Boom! Bo-o-m-m! Big Guns Roar Tonite. Retzlaff vs. Braddock. Schaaf Takes on Gross. Winners Later to Meet. Looking Over Long Jim.

WILL HE, OR WILL HE NOT, "LET IT GO"?

T[illegible] big guns boom [illegible] Charlie Retzlaff, the Dakota Destroyer [illegible] in the Boston Garden. Our own [illegible] Wrentham Dynamiter [illegible] Madison Square Garden, N. Y. [illegible] Ernie Schaaf. Every Bay State schoolboy [illegible] his tongue tip. And Retzlaff with [illegible] been screaming at you from the headlines [illegible] ago you saw the steep slant [illegible] of the Dakota [illegible] annihilate poor Jack McCarthy [illegible] same ring in which he will face Long Jim [illegible] But how about Jim Braddock who will be [illegible] the murderous hitting Dakota farmer? What [illegible] goes the [illegible] Jerseyman deliver? Has he a chance to stem the [illegible] of the one man who [illegible]



"AW—LET IT GO, JIM!"

Yes—and [illegible] It's Friday the thirteenth, and anything can happen. Long Jim has had enough to belt four Retzlaffs out of their brogans. But the trouble is getting Jim to "let it go." Long Jim is much like the guy [illegible] the kibitzer—that's what the Jewish boys call the fellow that looks over the shoulders of card players—tore his hair over when he saw him persist in leading a deuce when he had a handful of aces. Jim is, or at least was, woefully slow about playing that ace of a right hand sock of his. In most of the fights we saw him in Long Jim always held a debate with himself before letting that right hand punch go. Naturally, while Jim was debating, the other guy was popping him on the beezer, [illegible] him on the [illegible] otherwise piling up points. In other words, Jim is a slow thinker.

At the start of his career we were a great rooter for him. He was a fine, upstanding, soft-spoken, clean-living young fellow who used to spend his nights with the boys in the K. of C. [illegible] or otherwise conducting himself in a quiet, unobtrusive manner. His genial Celtic smile was a friend maker. We watched him come along bowling over opponent after opponent until it began to look as if the sports world might have another [illegible] J. J. Corbett, J. J. Jeffries, J. J. Tunney—as heavyweight champion. Then they made the mistake of matching Braddock with "smart" fighters. They paired him in a light heavyweight title scrap with Tommy Loughran and Long Jim scarcely laid a glove on Sir Thomas. We watched Long Jim in a few other fights against smart [illegible] and wore ourselves out exhorting: "Let it go, Jim!" An [illegible]

B[illegible] He had seve[illegible] by a [illegible] Jack Roper [illegible] Long Jim [illegible] fought a [illegible] unknown [illegible] and was kicked out of the ring [illegible] contest [illegible] with his [illegible] Max [illegible]

From the foregoing Charlie Retzlaff mustn't get the idea that Jim Braddock is any "push-over." No, no, no! Long Jim went ten rounds with Ernie Schaaf and Retzlaff will have to be a harder hitter than the Wrentham Dynamiter to blast Braddock loose from his moorings. He'll have to kill, or half kill, Braddock to knock him out. As far as we know, certainly not since he became well known in the fistic world, Braddock never listened to the full drone of the [illegible] count. But take it from us, Mawruss, he never has met quite as murderous a hitter as Retzlaff, and when we say that, we're not excepting Ernie Schaaf or anyone else.

Most [illegible] this sector of the fighting [illegible] think [illegible] be [illegible] for Ernie Schaaf. They say the Philadelph[illegible] belong in the same ring with Ernie. New Yorkers seem to be of the same opin[illegible] for the little birds say the advance sale for the Schaaf-Gross tete-a-tete is lame [illegible] The matchmakers have [illegible] hang it themselv[illegible] On paper, Gross does [illegible] a [illegible] opponent for Schaaf. Besides [illegible] New York card [illegible] Ernie [illegible] with the [illegible] fistic popularity he has with [illegible] of the woods.

The two matches tonight, Retzlaff vs. Braddock and Schaaf vs. Gross, [illegible] of what may prove the fistic piece de resistance of the year [illegible] between Schaaf and Retzlaff. Match those two terrific hitters [illegible] Braves Field, Mister Matchmaker, and big as the big ball [illegible] it will [illegible] out at the sides. There will be more man-sized clouts swung in one round of a Schaaf-Retzlaff shindy than there will be in a whole month of Sharkey's [illegible] championships. When the Wrentham Dynamiter and the Dakota Destroyer unlimber the big guns in the same ring, why we'll want a couple of seats in the front row. And a million or so other fight addicts will want the same thing.

"If I had a few of them here now I would tell them something, and it wouldn't be that this is Friday the 13th," said the Rajah today as he studied the box score which revealed that the second-place visitors from the old Bay State had taken the first game of the series from his league-leading Bruins by a score of 8 to 3.

"I had read so much about the McKechnie men playing over their heads that I actually believed it," the local pilot continued. "I know better now. Take it from me, these Braves are one of the strongest outfits in the league and don't let anybody tell you otherwise.

"The Cubs have played every club in the circuit to date except the Phils and the Warriors are by far the toughest bunch we have run up against. I still think my boys are the class of the loop, in spite of their setback in the opening game of this series, but I admit that I fear the visitors. They'll cause us all kinds of trouble unless we keep constantly on our toes."

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

Johnston—Sharkey and Schmeling have knocked my indoor boxing program overboard. With Jack and Max in town, the fans refuse to give the ordinary show a tumble.

Mr. Boston

Mr. Boston—How's interest in the Schaaf-Gross bout Friday night?

Johnston—Johnston—Sharkey and Schmeling have ruined it. It was bad enough to have Schmeling here to take a [illegible] at the new stadium on Long Island but Sharkey had to bust into town to start training. I wish he had remained in Boston for another week.

Mr. Boston—Sharkey's fighting for the title and he wants to be in the best possible condition when he enters the ring on June 21. He knows he's not meeting a push-over.

Johnston—You bet he isn't. Schmeling tells me he'll set a steady pace, and win when Sharkey blows up.

Mr. Boston—Sharkey says he isn't going to blow up.

Johnston—I'm only telling you what Schmeling says. That was a good crack Max made about letting Sharkey do the talking while he does the fighting.

Mr. Boston—Score one for Joe Jacobs.

Mr. Boston—Any chance of a Schaaf-Walker bout?

Johnston—Kearns tells me the match is okay with him. Walker should lick Paulino on May 26. Then he'll be all right for Schaaf. It will take a great fighter to lick Schaaf. He's like a battleship. You can't hurt him, while he eventually wears his opponent down. He's no bargain for anybody.

Mr. Boston—How will Schmeling and Sharkey draw?

Johnston—Around $800,000. There's always money around for a big fight. Didn't we sell out the Garden with Petrolle and Battalino? The fact the show will open the new stadium will also help. People like any kind of an opening. Open up breweries again and just watch the rush.

Mr. Boston—I think New England is more interested in the Sharkey-Schmeling bout than it was when these men battled two years ago.

Johnston—I'll be seeing you.

And now Paul Bowser has gone and signed Jack Sherry and Charley Strack to collide in a finish bout, best two falls out of three, at the Arena, on next Thursday night. Just like tossing a lion and a tiger into the same ring.

The Daily Dozen

—By Myles T. McSweeney—

If you lived out in Mankato, Minn., and saw a group of men marching along with rifles, you'd think they were going hunting. But you'd be wrong. They would be going out to play golf.

The course out there is so overrun with gophers that in order to tee off, you must first kill a dozen or so.

After the gophers got through with the course it took one golfer six months to play every hole.

This made him think there was something wrong with the course. Then someone showed him a gopher, digging a hole.

As a matter of fact, so did we.

It seems that a gopher is an animal which in no manner resembles an elephant. Outside of that, we know nothing about gophers.

There are at least 50 19th holes on the course, which makes it very popular.

There are many other interesting things about this course, but if you lived out there you'd know them, and if you don't, why worry?

"Your supply of bone plays ought to be exhausted by now but if it isn't I'll take your word for it. I don't want to witness any more displays of how not to play baseball. Pick up the marbles and call the exhibition off or I'll call you off the pay roll."

It remained, however, for Manager [illegible] Olson and [illegible] Earl Webb to combine in putting the prize boner in the ninth. The score was tied 4 to 4, there were two out, Cissell was on first and Porter at the bat.

Cissell started to steal. Porter being a left-handed batter, it was Rhyne's job to cover second. He did, but so did Olson and Porter drove the ball on the ground right through the spot the little second sacker had left.

Toss was bad but the worst was yet to come.

Webb didn't see this ball. Whether he lost it or whether he ever saw it nobody knows but he stood out there like a statue while the ball rolled to the fence and Cissell crossed the plate with the winning run just before Averill rolled into the final out.

Hull Halted Rise of Indrisano

B. JACK CONWAY

The fighting was at a fast pace from then on. During one of the exchanges of blows Hull let loose with a wild right hand punch. Indrisano's mouth was opened at the time and the blow landed with terrific force on his jaw.

When Indrisano got to his corner at the end of the round he told Jackie Williams his jaw had been injured. A hasty examination revealed the fact Johnny's jaw was broken. The bout was stopped and the hard luck East Boston youngster was rushed to a New York hospital for first aid treatment.

Jack Ryder's longing for another [illegible]

"We should win both the dashes," Ryder said. "Johnny McManus, who won the event at West Point and who came first in the freshman dashes at Harvard last year, is one of the best sprinters I have ever handled. Then to make our chances even stronger Ed Carey ran a 100 yarder in [illegible] seconds in a trial and may even beat out McManus.

"We have to concede the quarter to Holy Cross with Bernie McCafferty entered. McCafferty at his best, as he will be tomorrow, will take any quartermiler in the East. And I understand that Bart Sullivan has entered him in the half also. But here we are strongest and have an excellent chance to take all three places, with Jordan, Daley and Moynahan leading the pack.

[illegible] will double up in the mile and two mile. Lang and Ward should run one and two in the two mile [illegible]

[illegible] Couhig is entered in the shotput, discus and javelin, which will give him 13 and possibly 15 points.

SECRET NON-DRINKING, 5,000 CRITICS, AND DOCTORS

By GILBERT SELDES

GILBERT SELDES

ANONYMOUS LETTERS have always been considered contemptible and when they are threatening chain letters as well the common sense of the writers is as much in doubt as their decency. The latest form of this device is signed by each succeeding writer so that the impact of names from the Social Register, the (somewhat diminished) lords of finance, and the arts, may persuade you to continue the idiocy. Within the past three weeks I have received two such communications and the combined names would be enough to make a Broadway columnist happy, but a coincidence, the arrival of another letter seems to me more interesting. The new one is printed, its threat is veiled; it is an argument for prohibition. And it is anonymous.

Two Minds

It reads:

Would freedom from alcoholic drinking in the United States be a benefit to the moral and economic health of the nation?

If [illegible] not good for those dearest to you, it is not good for the American people.

Why the Secret?

Now why on earth should that be sent anonymously? The heading [illegible] "Do You Consider Yourself a Patriot?" and although the name of patriot has been used to cloak some pretty shady [illegible] patriotism itself isn't yet considered a crime. What sad [illegible] came over the Dry who printed this little card so [illegible] last moment he had to hide his identity? Or was it [illegible] was all printed he became aware of the double-[illegible] of the first paragraph: freedom from alcoholic drinking after all might be the beginning of an attack on [illegible] of a defense of it.

New Audiences

[illegible] designed [illegible] new audiences and the latest theater [illegible] three talents of Deems Taylor, Vladimir Rosing and [illegible] has managed to do [illegible] in a spectacular way [illegible] of an audience of critics [illegible] they know [illegible] of every man and woman [illegible] the aspiration to [illegible] somewhat [illegible] tendency to say "Good" [illegible] and people to put up ten dollars each for which [illegible] to five productions, but the [illegible] these productions to say whether they should be [illegible]

Righteous Judges

[illegible] interested enough (in the prospect [illegible] and a part of the profits) to want a play continued [illegible] the play in its first and decisive week [illegible] from the newspapers [illegible] the general public will be kept [illegible] theater door [illegible] body of judges ready to hang [illegible] or to hang [illegible] play.

What Really Costs

[illegible] the idea [illegible] the simple [illegible] than to put it on. Two weeks [illegible] Perhaps by having a permanent company and a [illegible] the new theater can manage to be economical [illegible] —which is nearly [illegible] more high flying professional.

Doctors and Priests

I have received two letters [illegible] remark that the movies were making [illegible] of surgeons. One (anonymous) of [illegible] a patient's silly idea. I was [illegible] what the movies do and I do not think the movies are making fun of [illegible] They are merely making [illegible] as formal and [illegible] as certain [illegible] of the churches have always been.

On the Nose

"Doctor and I," she writes, "had a good laugh last night over your thinking that 'the nose piece is applied so that no profane smell may corrupt the purity of the ceremony.' The nose piece is used not to protect him from odors but to prevent germs from the nostrils from being blown into the incision. Under such strain many doctors breathe with force—similar to a snore. But even under normal respiration the force of the breath outward is too great to take a chance when you consider the proximity of the open incision. The head piece, you know, is to prevent dust from the hair from falling into the wound. And it often takes one nurse's time to mop the perspiration from the uncovered parts of the surgeon's face to keep it from dripping into the wound. Operating rooms are kept very warm."

The [illegible] sheer flattery. I did not know and am glad to know.

Concert by Harvard Club

By MOSES SMITH

The Harvard Glee Club, conducted by Dr. Archibald T. Davison, gave its customary spring concert at the Museum of Fine Arts before an audience of about 2500 persons. This was some hundreds short of the number that this concert has attracted in the past, for we have seen the museum crowded almost to the very door with a multitude eager to hear this great chorus at the same time that it could enjoy another of the arts without charge.

Yet this same chorus now finds it difficult to assemble for a program like that of last night an audience that will pay its way in at the doors. What the inferences are to be drawn we leave for wiser brains, but they cannot be pleasant. The Glee Club and Dr. Davison may at least take pride in the fact that they have listeners under any circumstances, for no one who attends concerts frequently is ignorant of the fact that there are programs which will not draw an audience even of deadheads.

It is almost needless to say that the Glee Club sang last night with beauty of tone and sensitiveness of phrasing, with and response to Dr. Davison's sense of style as revealed in numbers from such wide sources as Beethoven, Bach and Brahms, Palestrina, Morley and English folk songs and modern art pieces.

Choral Group in Concert

The George L. Dwyer Choral Ensemble will give a concert at Jordan Hall next Tuesday evening. The ensemble is made up of [illegible] members and is under the able direction of George Sawyer Dunham, head of the Department of Music at Lasell Seminary. The program should prove enjoyable. There will be both group singing and solos. The featured soloist will be Vera Keane, contralto. Miss Keane first gained national fame by winning the National Federation of Music contest held in Jordan Hall. Since then she has been warmly praised by music critics for her two concerts in Jordan Hall.

Local Team on Boston Bill

Al and Fannie Stedman, vaudeville artists, appearing this week at the RKO Keith-Boston, were born at City Point, South Boston. Their mother, Mrs. Mary A. Stedman, still resides there and a Stedman family reunion is being held this week.

Al and Fannie, who are two of the best known of comedy artists, both graduated from the South Boston high school. They received their early stage experience when they appeared with their father, Larry Stedman, a minstrel man who died 10 years ago. They have one brother, Jack, who is a fight trainer.

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Burgoo King's plunge forward to catch the leader with a sudden spurt. Then comes the thrilling neck-to-neck struggle as the two horses round the turn to the home stretch. Economic falls back as Burgoo King increases his stride and wins. Stephen [illegible] passes Economic and there is another exciting struggle, but Economic holds on and [illegible] forward five lengths behind the winner. It was a thrilling race, thrillingly pictured.

One of the greatest fire pictures ever made shows the spectacular scenes of the destruction of the Cunard Line piers in New York City, with a loss of two million dollars. It was the worst fire New York has had in years. The tremendous volume of smoke and the fierce flames make the pictures most awe-inspiring, while the waterboats playing their streams upon the conflagration add great beauty to the spectacle.

Hollywood, May 13. A woman walked into a very fashionable restaurant the other evening and summoned the head waiter.

"Do you mind dogs in here?" she asked.

"Yes, we certainly do, Madam," said the waiter.

"That's fine," replied the woman, "then I wish you'd mind this one for me. I want to go across the street and eat."

Girl About Town

—By ALYCE SIEMENS—

All the World, Etc. . . .

It was so calm and sweet. Her little hand
Lay warm in mine. Along the clean, soft sand
The wavelets ran. I said, "It's lovely here
By night, a night in April, at Revere."

We talked about the pleasant house we'd own,
A shaggy dog to greet me in the gloam—

A badge, a scowl, a flashlight—
"Scram, you two!"

THE GENTIL KNIGHT

A Deuce of Funnies!

To [illegible] no doubt seen and heard a great deal of Burns and Allen [illegible]. We dined with them the other day and heard Gracie Allen ask George [illegible] Allen who the new fellow was who was playing [illegible] baseball. After Burns had named dozens of baseball men Gracie piped up, "Oh, you know who I mean. [illegible] I read it in the paper [illegible] about Babe Ruth's double winning [illegible] game." And George who [illegible] of golf [illegible] about the first time Gracie ever played [illegible] when [illegible] spoke about having to [illegible] that they [illegible] to dig up the caddy. [illegible] Gracie [illegible] her was hand [illegible] she [illegible] peeping [illegible]. She loves the theater. Never gets enough of it and goes to all the shows possible when she has a night off. [illegible] sweet [illegible] to George when she thinks no one's looking. Even kisses him "on the quiet" in rare moments when she's not gabbing. When they first began their act he was doing straight to George's comedy. After the first show Gracie got so many laughs that George just rebuilt the act and since that time he's been building acts and doing [illegible] Gracie to [illegible]. And we [illegible] think Burns and Cliff O'Rourke have identical speaking voices. They [illegible] begin a [illegible] with [illegible] hardly [illegible] he finishes at the Met.

Stronger Sex Bits:

We're as far off now as we were before we called on Jim Brennan, manager of Loew's State . . . As to why he's still a very eligible bachelor . . . We made up our mind to find out direct . . . Didn't have much luck . . . Even his secretary (for the past dozen years) Claire Mintz, couldn't enlighten us beyond that "he's a mystery" . . . He admits never having proposed to a young lady in his life . . . "The hold out!" . . . Of course, he gives us that age-old excuse that his business took too many hours of his day . . . But, he did let slip out that he keeps very late hours . . . So, girls, why not form the line on the right some midnight and trail that big, handsome, Irishman? . . . You can never tell . . . And we found a memo on James Anthony "the silent worker" . . . Beacon Hill's Henry K. Cushing . . . And Joe M. Lyons, the big brother of Kilby st. . . . All who should be listed here, we're told.

Bi-Centennial Tip:

When the Washington Memorial highway is dedicated in June [illegible] may [illegible] a beautiful shrine marking the highway at Wayside Inn entrance . . . Costing between a quarter and a half million dollars . . . For which the world's most sculptors are now bidding for the designing of [illegible] . . . With Henry Ford the donor [illegible] don't be [illegible] surprise you when the news of it breaks soon . . . With Ford visiting these parts within the next fortnight . . . Harvard's Dr. Albert Bushnell Hart, whose home town is Cleveland, was overjoyed when a new school was recently dedicated to him there . . . He's the best known authority on Washington and a presidential commissioner of the United States George Washington Bi-Centennial Commission of which Henry Ford is also a commissioner . . . Let's see, didn't our Mayor promise about six months ago that the city of Boston would expend some seventy five thousands of dollars for this year's 200th anniversary? . . . What's happened to it? . . . Or is the committee falling down on activities in the Hub, the richest city in Revolutionary history in the world? . . . In New York 3200 members were appointed by Mayor "Jimmy" Walker's Bi-Centennial committee . . . Everywhere you turn there they're not letting the citizens forget what year it is . . . We almost thought the Tercentenary doers had taken out a concession on Gotham for the season!

You Might Know!

There'll be a regular assembling of "that old gang of mine" when Jack Brown has his opening on the 28th at Nuttings-on-the-Charles . . . He intends to feature the better heart-breakers of Boston . . . Charles Weeks will do his hot-flamey chirpings . . . Perley Breed, with his sophisticated base everyone, that gets [illegible] . . . And [illegible] what lovely creature now [illegible] . . . And Harry Marschad who is still the champ at beating out as neat a tune on any damsel's heart as the drum beats . . . So dancing daughters of Boston that's where the [illegible] will hang out the [illegible] the [illegible] on!

Her Stage Ambitions Forsaken

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

[illegible] Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, May 13.—Maybe it's a far cry from being a woman stage producer to a comedienne. Yet Ruth Selwyn, who produced a revue on Broadway, is rejoicing at the opportunity to play opposite Buster Keaton in "Speakeasy."

Louella O. Parsons

The Selwyns, Edgar and Ruth, are now definitely a part of Hollywood and it's doubtful if they will return to Broadway. Edgar is finding directing pictures preferable to the uncertainty of directing stage plays while Ruth is content to be a screen actress and forget her aspirations to become a woman stage producer.

Edward Sedgwick, who is as well and as husky as of yore, is directing Mr. Keaton's opera.

Calhern Returns

Where has Louis Calhern been these many months? I suppose he has been in New York, on the stage, for we haven't heard of him as being even in line for a picture until we were told today he plays one of the male leads in "They Call It Sin." Calhern is a good actor and mighty attractive. Jack Warner bought "They Call It Sin" in New York. Loretta Young and George Brent are the youthful attraction and Thornton Freeland directs.

* * *

"Bittersweet" Delayed

The reported Ernst Lubitsch contract to direct "Bittersweet" for Fox is denied. "Bittersweet" and "Cavalcade" will not be made until late in the fall or early next year. There has also been no contract signed with Jeanette MacDonald to appear in the chief feminine role in "Bittersweet" that Evelyn Laye created on the stage. Now the name of Bebe Daniels enters the picture.

Bebe Daniels

Bebe has one more picture that she will probably make for Warner Brothers and after that she will be free to listen to offers. Her tremendous success in "Rio Rita" is influencing the Fox company. Evelyn Laye is also a likely candidate but so far any announcement as to who will be head woman in the epic is decidedly premature and I get this right from headquarters.

An Official Trip

I apologize to Nancy Smith for even hinting that I thought the Neil Hamilton bicycle hike to San Francisco was a publicity frame-up. Nancy comes back and makes it so official we have to listen. Neil Hamilton is leaving from the city hall at 11:30 a. m. today, Friday, May 13, instead of at 2:30 as originally planned. When he arrives at Sacramento he will bear with him an invitation from Mayor Porter to Governor James Rolph, Jr., to attend the Olympic games this summer in Los Angeles. Hamilton plans to arrive in San Francisco on May 19 at 2:30 p. m. He is returning via the reliable choo choo to begin work on May 20 opposite Constance Bennett at the Warner Brothers' studios in "Two Against the World."

Studio Notes

A line or two: Columbia announces that Adolphe Menjou will play Colt in the Thatcher Colt series. Since Harry Cohn says 500 letters were received from applicants who wish to appear in this thrilling serial, he believes the signing of Menjou is an interesting bit of news. George Meeker is on the Fox lot, donning makeup for "The First Year." Maude Eburn and Dudley Digges have also joined Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell in their next co-starring comedy drama. Morgan Farley.

Rod LaRocque and Vilma Banky Happy and Free From Studio Worries

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

What of Vilma Banky and Rod La Rocque? Questions regarding these two film favorites have been frequently popped to us of late. That they are warmly remembered by picture fans is revealed in the tone of letter inquiries, some of them, [illegible] from women and girls [illegible] in their references, particularly to the divine Vilma. Information just received is to the effect that she and her husband are keeping happy house, free for the time from studio or stage worries. Miss Banky's ambition is to be housewife and raise one or more little La Rocques, while Rod is zealous in his devotion to his hobby, science.

* * *

Rod and Vilma, we are told, were wise enough to save their earnings [illegible] and this permits them [illegible] from acting. Rod has established a workshop of his own, [illegible] for engineering, the [illegible] for [illegible] alone [illegible] and at [illegible] he [illegible] to Ruth Margaret Nagel, 11-year-old child of Conrad and Ruth Helms Nagel.

Vilma Banky

Rod—hero or villain as the scenarist cast him in his movies—[illegible] friend of [illegible] California, and we are [illegible] he may in time become associated with one of them in scientific research. He has several inventions to his credit, one of them a process [illegible].

"Rod himself made every part of the telescope for my daughter," Conrad Nagel informs us. "He has ground all the lens by hand. It is made for astronomical purposes."

The last time we talked with Rod and Vilma was on their [illegible] in the stage play "[illegible] Are Fine." They were happy lovers then, and Mr. Nagel [illegible] they are just as happy.

"Each lives for the other," he states. "There was never a sweeter love match than theirs. They intend to lead a life that will keep them together, with a home that will be for them a year-round home. Both love children, my little girl calls them Uncle and Aunt, and other children of the Colony are included in their roster of friends.

"Rod's hobbies are several. He goes in for the collecting of whips, and he can use them expertly, especially the long Gaucho kind. His collection of whips is probably one of the best in the country.

"You ask me to name my own hobbies. Tennis, swimming and bicycling. Rod is also an enthusiast over the biking; Neil Hamilton, too. That's how we have our fun, and keep in condition for our work."

RESERVOIR OF IDLE MONEY TO OVERFLOW

By B. C. FORBES

[illegible]

Let the Federal Reserve continue its present easy money policy, and the banks, especially the big banks, will become so sick of having idle funds on their hand that they will inevitably find uses for it. Already some of them are buying high-grade bonds, although it is not true that any formal bond-buying pool has been organized. As high-grade bonds advance to levels which make their yields less attractive, banking funds will gravitate to other uses.

He agreed: "What is now being done, what is now going on, is not spectacular. But it is better so. Spectacular action sometimes brings reaction."

Then [illegible] I asked.

[illegible] see what happens in [illegible] to make any dogmatic predictions. I'm not [illegible] over Congress as many people are, because you must have noted that while a lot of wild talk and a lot of proposals have been trotted out, the actual definite action taken by Congress has been on the whole very helpful.

Normally we have about 45,000,000 people gainfully employed. Today probably 8,000,000 to 9,000,000 are unemployed. If all work were more equitably divided, each one should have at least half-time occupation.

Constructive and productive enterprises of lasting benefit to the people should be undertaken by the city, county, state and federal governments, and, if necessary, the federal government should assist in financing the others. Employment in such work should not exceed 30 hours per week.

RAIL SELLING PUTS WALL ST. LIST LOWER

New York, May 13—Selling of the railroads was a main factor today in putting the general list in Wall Street lower. Transactions continued in light volume through most of the session.

Scattered trickles of liquidation met with little resistance and were sufficient to wash the general price level down close to the depression bottom recorded last week.

HANGOVER SELLING SEEN.

Nothing particularly new in the carrier outlook materialized. Brokers felt that much of the selling still represented hangover liquidation of collateral loans, falling upon a market all but devoid of buyers.

After selling off 1 to 3 points in many of the principal shares, the list stiffened a little at midday, with recoveries of as much as a point in some places, then eased again.

Among issues losing 2 to 3 points were Union Pacific, Atchison, Norfolk and Wetsern, American Tobacco "B," Western Union, Detroit dison, General Foods, Coca Cola, Eastman, Drug, and others.

Peoples Gas, Commonwealth and Southern preferred, and Pacific Telephone preferred lost 4 to 5, while United Aircraft preferred dropped nearly 7.

U. S. Steel sagged more than a point. The closing tone was heavy. The day's turnover approximated 800,000 shares.

What with the continued uncertainties over taxation, Wall Street did not as yet appear to be ready to take an unqualifiedly bullish view of the proposed federal relief measures but hope was expressed that the compromise between Republican and Democratic leaders would expedite legislation and open the way for adjournment before the June political conventions.

U. S. BOND ISSUES RALLY

While the latest slump in prices, virtually cancelling the recovery of late last week, has given rise to some rumor-mongering, usually well informed quarters expressed the view that in the main it merely reflected scattered necessitous selling out of accounts of persons short of cash.

Weekly brokerage loan figures, showing a drop of $61,000,000, in a week of light trading, clearly indicated that much of the selling reflected pettisoning of marginal holdings.

Extremely light volume of the selling has been the most encouraging aspect of the market. In the case of a temporary 2-point drop in Colgate-Palmolive-Peet, news tickers said definitely that it reflected merely the liquidation of a single large account.

In some cases, of course the market is still attempting to discount expected diverse action, as in the case of New Haven preferred.

BOOST IN STEEL MAJOR MOVE

New York, May 13—What is regarded as a significant step toward distinct improvement of its position by the steel industry was contained in the announcement that the leading producers in the Cleveland and Youngstown districts had boosted there quarter sheet and bar prices $2 a ton.

The move is seen as evidence of a determined effort on the part of the major units in the industry to end the "cut-throat" price-cutting, which has severely curtailed the income of the steel industry, even under present low operations.

Another motive seen behind the step is the determination of the steel industry to retain the benefits of the recent wage and salary cuts, which would be lost under a continuation of the mad scramble for business and the granting of price concessions to obtain orders.

The advance was regarded as bolstering the steel price structure where weakness might be most likely to develop—in finished sheet prices. The price boost is seen in the serving of notice by the larger producers, whose plants are idle and who have realided the folly of price cutting, upon the smaller units who may not be convinced that raw materials will go higher, that price-cutting must end.

Warren Bros. Gets Cuban Settlement

Warren Bros. Co. has reached a settlement with the Cuban Government on an open account of approximately $1,750,000 arising from the Central highway contract. Total value of the contract was $73,000,000.

Another agreement reached with the Cuban Government relieves Warren Bros. Co. of any further obligation in respect to maintenance of the highway. In return, the company has turned over its Cuban plant to the government. The company had ben obligated to a six-year maintenance guarantee.

Grains Are Firm in Chicago Market

Chicago, May 13 (AP)—Overseas purchases of North American wheat, including considerable United States hard winter wheat from private holders, gave a little upturn to grain markets late today.

Wheat closed firm, unchanged to ¾ up, corn ⅛-⅜ advanced, oats unchanged to ⅛ higher.

DUN'S REPORTS GOOD SPOTS

R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly trade review in this week's issue will say regarding trade conditions in Boston that, while the outlook has improved slightly in some lines, there has, as yet, been no sign of a material increase in business, in manufacturing or wholesale lines. Markdown sales at the local department stores have been well patronized.

Some of the woolen manufacturers appear hopeful of an increase in business in the near future. Receipts of wool in Boston to date have been 32,144,600 pounds, as compared with 56,567,900 pounds for the same date last year. Shipments thus far this year have been about half the amount recorded for 1931, for the same date.

Packer hides have been more active during the week at higher prices, but the demand for New England skins has been light and the market weak. Shoe manufacturers continue to operate moderately and the new orders are coming in slowly. Leather is quiet without much price change.

Automobile registrations are still below last year, but deliveries are now being made on one of the low priced models which has stimulated sales to some extent.

Automobile specialties and tires are slightly more active. Receipts of fish at the three principal New England ports for the first three months of the year amounted to 55,686,000 pounds, as compared with 69,052,000 pounds last year.

Salem Is Seeking $100,000 Paving Loan

Salem will receive bids until 11 a. m., May 19, for $100,000 street paving loan dated June 1, 1932, and payable 1933 to 1937. Bidder to name rate of interest in multiples of ¼ of 1 per cent, not exceeding 4¼ per cent. No split rates will be considered.

Turner Centre to Reduce Its Capital

Sales of A & P in Four Weeks Reach Total of $72,368,664

Sales of The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company for the four-week period ending April 30 were $72,368,664. This compares with $85,026,365 for the same period in 1931, and is a decrease of $12,657,701, or 14.89 per cent.

April sales, expressed in tons, were estimated as 422,714 this year, compared with 456,704 in April, 1931. This is a decrease in quantity of merchandise sold of 33,990 tons, or 7.44 per cent.

Average weekly sales in April were $18,092,166, compared with $21,256,591 in 1931, a decrease of $3,164,426. Average weekly tonnage sales were 105,678, compared with 114,176 in April, 1931, a decrease of 8498.

Denies British Rate Cut Is Imitating U. S. Policy

London, May 13 (AP)—Reduction of the discount rate of the Bank of London from 3 to 2½ per cent yesterday does not mean that the bank is starting a credit expansion plan similar to that of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, a high official of the bank said today.

His statement was prompted by reports current here from New York which made that suggestion.

"The policy of the Bank of England at present is easy money and the making of money easier and easier," he said, "but nothing comparable to the Federal Reserve Bank's methods is contemplated." Yesterday's discount rate reduction was the fifth in less than three months.

First National Stores' Tonnage Gain

C. F. Adams, treasurer of First National Stores, Inc., announced today:

The Massachusetts Food Index No. is approxiamtely 17.92 per cent below a year ago, indicating increased tonnage sales of approximately 11.95 per cent for First National Stores, Inc. for the four weeks ending April 30, 1932.

"During the month of April, 1932, seventeen retail prices in our line were increased and forty-seven were decreased, indicating, as a whole, a downward trend in prices of the commodities which we sell."

SALES

Bank of Sweden Lowers Rate

Stockholm, Sweden, May 13 (AP)—The National Bank of Sweden reduced its discount rate today from 5 per cent to 4½ per cent, effective May 17.

Siam Off Gold Standard

Bangkok, Siam—Siam went off the gold standard because of a slump in the price of rice. The tical went back immediately to its old rate of eleven to the pound sterling. The rice industry was expected to benefit immediately by the change because the bulk of the trade is in countries whose currency either is the pound or is influenced by the pound.

Export Copper Offered at 5⅝ Cents

London, May 13—While the official price of the Copper Exporters, Inc., remains unchanged at 6¼ cents a pound, c. i. f., Hamburg, London and Havre, a customs smelter is offering copper at 5⅝ cents.

Committee Opposes Oil Merger

New York, May 13 (AP)—Protective committee for the minority stockholders of the Prairie Pipe Line Co. and Prairie Oil & Gas Co. has been formed for the purpose of putting itself on record as opposed to the recent consolidation of the Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corp. The committee is composed of William Roy Carney, and Quintin Johnstone, Jr., of Chicago, and Kriegh G. Carney of Des Moines, Ia., all share holders representing substantial blocks of stock, it is said.

CORPORATIONS ARE STRONGER

New York, May 13 (AP)—The tremendous battle of industry against the adversities of the past two years or more, some financial authorities believe, may be, in a way, looked upon as a 'blessing in disguise" for those organizations that weather the storm.

Readjustments of managements and operations, it is pointed out, are now taking place in most of the large organizations of the country, and, when marked improvement in conditions does finally make its appearance, an entirely new basis of production, sales and distribution may be expected to have been achieved.

Productive processes have been accelerated, man-hour output has been accelerated by incentive compensation plans and real economy has been discovered.

"While peak production and distribution volumes of the past decade are not likely to be reattained in the near future, many concerns which have adjusted their operations and policies to permanent changes in the economic picture are in better position than ever before to benefit from moderately improved demand."

"Briefly," it is said, "American industry has been occupied for the past three years in shifting from an 'order-taking' basis to the more normal status of competition for sales on a merit basis."

Forecast of Gain in Profit His 'Duty'

London, May 13—At annual meeting of Dunlop Rubber Co., Sir Eric Gedes, chairman, referring to statement of directors in the annual report that, in absence of unforeseen circumstances, this year should show an improvement over last year, declared this forecast was made with full realization of unprecedented circumstances prevailing throughout the world and after mature consideration of all facts and estimates of revenue and expenses now available.

He said economies already realized and in process are so substantial and provisions for losses in stock values and debts so fully made that:

"With our improved budgetary control we feel we ought, in present circumstances, to give a forecast, even remembering the risks of prophecy as we do."

State Street Trust Gets Beverly Award

Beverly awarded to State Street Trust Co. at 2.23 per cent $200,000 loan maturing Nov. 28. Other bidders were Rutter & Co., 2.25 per cent; Beverly National Bank, 2.35 per cent plus $1.80; Second National Bank of Boston, 2.37 per cent; Beverly Trust, 2.40 per cent; Faxon, Gade & Co., 2.47 per cent, and W. O. Gay & Co., 2.83 per cent.

THE VOICE OF BROADWAY

By LOUIS SOBOL

Broadway Merry-Go-Round

Come on, step lively there, folks! The bell's sounded and the Broadway merry-go-round's ready to start. Never mind paying in advance—you'll pay—and how you'll pay if you continue to ride on this crazy carousel! Now before we get into full swing, just let your eyes rest on the smallish fellow over there. A comedian, he is—and a good one, Herman Timberg, and notice the reckless abandon with which he dances and the sparkle in his voice as he wisecracks. A game chap, take it from me, for Timberg is almost blind—in fact, some time ago, one expert told him his eyesight wouldn't last, but Herman didn't — wouldn't believe him—and you talk of miracles! I'm telling you this is one, for Herman's eyesight instead of getting worse began to improve, and he's confident that in time it'll come back to him full strength. Now that's confidence for you, and that's pluck—and if you were to hop off this very second, at least the ride was worth while just to look Timberg over. And there's Jackie Osterman, another comedian. Half a dozen years or more ago, no one was headed for a brighter future; but the volcanic Jackie insisted upon playing the wild boy and gradually theatrical avenues—the worthwhile ones—slapped a detour sign right in his face. Another fellow would have gone completely gutter, but that's where you have to hand Osterman credit. He's pulled himself together—he's dodging the rum bottle—he's getting down to serious work—and the future looks bright. His crackling wit will soon be heard over the radio—he's scheduled to be featured in a musical next fall — his snappy column in Variety is beginning to attract attention outside of theatrical circles. Go to it, Jackie!

A pretty gal, isn't she, Miriam Stuart, I mean. She's played a few minor roles in Broadway productions, and then I lost track of her until a week ago when she called me up and told me she was going to enter a convent. "You're kidding," I said. "What are you going to do in a convent?" Gradually the story came out. She was in love—she had been for some time—but the love was unrequited. There was nothing to do—since no other love would replace it—but to take the veil. Then the day before yesterday she called up again—she had decided that perhaps after all I was right. She wouldn't enter the convent. Reminds me of that other beauty—Dorothy Knapp. Wasn't it only last year that this former Carroll beauty went into seclusion and admitted that she was about to become a nun? Most of us, remembering the gayety of the lass, were skeptical. Well, Dorothy never did enter the convent. But I wonder what complex in these girls impels them to announce religious intentions. Can cite almost a dozen instances of showgirls who avowed they were going to take the veil. None of them has. They rarely do.

Texas Guinan'll be back in town shortly, and in the meantime her various stooges here are readying her new show. There'll be practically all new faces and shapes in the lineup this season for the Guinan gal dismissed her whole crew in St. Louis because of their rather hilarious activities at a party there. Now that sounds funny—and it is funny. The idea of Texas finding fault with her pretty little hoodlums because of their hilarity doesn't hit the kosher mark, but the truth of it is the boisterous, raucous-voiced gal of the blonde marcelled coiffure and my word for it. Two old-time fa- the gaudy gowns is a puritan at heart. You'll die at that—but take vorites have been in town lately. Bessie Clayton, the girl whose legs were the rage several decades ago. What a dancer she was—probably the greatest of her type in her day—and do you remember how they even named a certain confection after her? Well, Bessie's legs are still as pretty, but she admits ruefully that she'll dance no more.

Around and around we go and many are the sights and many are the faces that greet us. For instance, over there on West 54th st., entering his huge Isotta Fraschini is Harry Richman and in the car is Lou Davis. Richman, the singer, and Davis, the millionaire meatman who's better known as a song writer of distinction. Two more gentlemen to add to your list of Broadway pals. Richman has been censured—and he's done many things for which he rated censure—but through it all, Davis has been his constant pal. It's a more subdued Richman these days—a Richman who is ill—worn looking, heavy under the eyes, deep lines in his face—a more serious mien. But the voice—the golden personality voice is grander than ever. Lately, it has a soul.

Now wasn't it only a few weeks ago that your attention to pretty little Sally Eilers who had joined us temporarily on this Broadway merry-go-round? I remarked regretfully if you recall, that the marital romance between her and Hoot Gibson was practically at an end. Sally didn't like that. In fact, she told mutual friends that Mister Sobol may have been wrong before—but never had he been quite so wrong as at this time. She and Hoot part? Absurd! She went back to the coast and joined him at a party. But alas! yesterday's papers carried the report that Sally was starting proceedings for divorce.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.—Suffolk, ss.—Probate Court.—To the heirs-at-law, next-of-kin, creditors, and all other persons interested in the estate of WALTER CHESTER DOW also called WALTER C. DOW, late of Boston, in said County, deceased, intestate. Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court to grant a letter of administration on the estate of said deceased to CHARLES R. YOUNG of Quincy, in the County of Norfolk, or to some other suitable person. You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Boston, in said County of Suffolk, on the nineteenth day of May, A.D. 1932, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be granted. And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof, by publishing this citation once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Boston Evening American, a newspaper published in said Boston, the last publication to be one day at least before said Court, and by mailing, post-paid, a copy hereof to each of said next of kin, seven days at least before said Court. Witness, WILLIAM M. PREST, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this twenty-ninth day of April in the year one thousand nine hundred and thirty-two.

What the Hearst Papers Advocate No. 8 Five-billion-dollar Federal loan for public works and to relieve unemployment.

BOSTON, FRIDAY, MAY 13, 1932

Boston's Millions for Relief Show Need for Prosperity Bond Issue

Convincing need of a national Prosperity Loan of $5,000,000,000 for needed public works is shown right here in our own city of Boston. And Boston is in far better shape than the rest of the country.

John J. Shields, the Director of Municipal Employment, estimates there are 100,000 able-bodied persons out of work in the city of Boston.

He estimates there are 250,000 persons dependent upon the 100,000 who are out of work. This condition can be largely remedied by the immediate adoption of the Prosperity Loan plan by Congress.

In other words, one person out of every eight is unemployed in the city of Boston, and more than one person out of every three you know or meet is without earned income.

Is there any wonder that more than $7,000,000 from the City Treasury was spent for charity relief last year and that at the rate we are going more than $12,000,000 will be spent ere the year 1932 is written into history!

Applied to the Nation, this means that in excess of $1,[illegible]00,000,000 is being expended this year for the welfare relief of unemployment.

And this does not include the very tremendous sums being disbursed by private charities and by the donations of generous citizens to their friends and to the beggar on the street.

Talk about England and Germany and the dole!

We have in the United States of America the most elaborate, expensive and unproductive system of dole in the history of any nation.

If anything at all can be said favorably upon it, it is that the people of the United States, from Boston to San Francisco, detest the dole, dislike to be subjects of charity or pauperism and are desirous of earning what they receive by their honest, dignified labor.

Under these conditions, why a dole at all?

Why demean our people when they do not want to be degraded? Why make paupers and beggars of them, traducing their self-respect and dignity? Why hand out these enormous sums of money and derive no product from it at all?

Give to them the Five Billion Dollar Prosperity Bond Issue by the national government.

Instead of promoting idleness, as Governor Ely well says, the country would be receiving new highways, public buildings, rivers and harbors developments and the other improvement of natural resources which a great and progressive country should have to accommodate the needs of a growing population.

The national government, even now after three years of talk, can be made to adopt this beneficient and sensible program by the pressure of public opinion.

Tell the President, the Senators and the Congressmen you want this done.

Tell them you know that the $5,000,000,000 Prosperity Bond Issue will relieve unemployment, revive business, promote confidence and restore normal conditions.

Write to them. Or sign the petitions printed elsewhere in this newspaper. Get your club or organization to adopt suitable resolutions.

Bedlam of Traffic

Perhaps it would be a good thing. They believe they could finance and own it at less expense than the rent they are now paying for their headquarters in a private building. Every dollar they can save in administrative expense would redound to the advantage of the car-riders.

But, before more traffic is concentrated at the junction of Charles and Cambridge sts., to clutter up the roadways, we would like to see the traffic authorities do something to unscramble the tremendous and irritating congestion which exists there now.

The place is like a madhouse every afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock. Auto traffic from Cambridge and Somerville to Boston and from Boston to the North Shore section converges there and the place is a bedlam of honking horns and thousands of commuters moving along at a snail's pace. The people who use our streets are entitled to some semblance of traffic order, not to maddening and expensive delay.

New York Day by Day

Thoughts While Strolling

NEW YORK, May 13—Thoughts while strolling: Those muffled little squares. Where women knit. And old men dream. Somehow I don't miss Andrew Mellon a little bit. No wonder they call them Blue Chip stocks. "Blue" is the word. Ballard McDonald back from a globe trot.

Sylvia, the masseuse, is a thin edition of Vicki Baum. They are calling a certain noisy Child's "The Racket Club." No one ever sees George Gershwin's brother, Ira. James Montague and Bide Dudley bear a resemblance. Francis H. Sisson, a Galesburg, Ill., boy who made good in the city.

Who remembers when it required a "pull" to have a telephone installed in a hurry? George M. Cohan and Charles King have identical stage mannerisms. "Count" Davis and his white police dog. Does Howard Acton call that a mustache? One of my favorite people—Corey Ford. Swell name for a cat, "Washington Mews."

Those hawkers of dirty five-cent books—"Put it in your pocket quick before the cops see us. And around the corner you find it a railroad time-table. The acid humor of those jewelry auctioneers. The graceful loop of Albert Mander's four-in-hand—dude of the haberdashers. Puff ties are in again, too.

If the fur stores can carry on, the rest of us shouldn't squawk. Billy Moore on crutches. There should have been a step there! Kate Cross and her Sealyham. Tommy Lyman's complexion suggests a waxen gardenia. Gerald Breitigam. One word description of Fifi D'Orsay—wiggly.

Whatever became of queensware stores? Central Park's evening obbligato of insects. And the overtone of sparrows. Frank Case and Jesse Lasky, constant companions. A prophet mounts a Columbus Circle soap box. First stragglers of the bread line. The good looking Mary Roberts Rinehart.

Overheard: "I flattened a pansy." Moe Ducore in his drugstore doorway. Two taxi drivers leap from their seats in an indignant, twirling flurry. A cop's shrill whistle and life flows on. Many wonder why? Nobody appears more aloof than Lee Shubert.

* * *

Charlie Hughes, gazetteer from Detroit, dropped in to call on one of the witty glossarians of the magazines. It was 6 p. m. and the magazinist answered the bell in pajamas. "We had a heavy storm last night," he explained, "and (lurching against a chair) the ship is still rolling."

* * *

The oddest of all beauty salons effloresces in a gray spire in the Snooty Sixties. A van dyked elegant in white surgeon coat is in charge. Here aristocratic kiyoodles receive tonsorial touches. Shampoos are from $4 to $15. Teeth are cleaned for $2. Because of the fear of water, rheumatic canines are dry cleaned for $10, a process requiring the entire day. Uniformed attendants are on telephone call to air dogs for $2 an hour. Such grandeur is likely to foment a fury toward the innocent canines. But it is not their fault. They are not responsible for nit-wit overlords.

* * *

Dogs have an acute sensitivity to such high blown fanciness. An always docile Scottie on Long Island, bathed by its mistress, was sprayed with perfume. He turned and bit her savagely and rushed out of the house, never to return. He couldn't take it.

* * *

This morning I talked to an $18,500 a year secretary—one of those tight-lipped efficients whose self effacement had the evaporative qualities of smoke. He is coldly British, receiving instructions with icy bows and intoning that paradoxical "Very good, sir!" with the rising inflection. His employer may announce he is going up the gang-plank at midnight around 4 in the afternoon for India and has only to walk on the boat. Every other detail from take-off to return is handled expertly.

* * *

* * *

Letter: "I got my first squint at you at ——. You have not deceived me. You are no Romeo—not with those legs."

Listen, World!
By Elsie Robinson

How They Saved Love

THEY'D BEEN married 12 years. Or was it 14? She found it difficult to remember. Time had lost its meaning. Everything had lost its meaning. Their marriage had come to that.

Incredible! Of course she'd always heard that marriage came to that. But—theirs wouldn't; theirs would be different—a free and lovely thing, gallant and glamorous. Knowing the dangers beforehand would keep them safe. They wouldn't do the stupid, unfair things that wrecked other lives.

Elsie Robinson

So they started; and then, in spite of everything, marriage had gone wrong. Where? When? She didn't know how. But somewhere along the way they had taken the wrong turn.

And now she might as well admit the truth—look it straight in the face instead of running away—THEIR MARRIAGE WAS OVER.

Not legally over, perhaps, but spiritually finished. The thing that really meant marriage—that secret sense of oneness—had broken. They had become two hostile strangers, doing accustomed things with a kind of desperate carelessness to hide their inner demoralization.

And now, where did they go from here? Night and day that question was running through Amy Morton's brain, through her blood. Life must go on, somehow. But why did it go on, how did it go on, when love had ended?

Over and over, that question. No other sound in all the world for Amy but that question.

She did not know that she was going to find the answer when she impulsively left New York and went back to the country town where her family, the Westover generations, lived in almost every block. She ran away to escape the city heat and grime, that was all; to find a little quiet. Instead, she found herself embroiled in family affairs.

She had forgotten that "family" meant so many affairs—such endless, trivial feuds and fusses and foolishness. Pickling peaches. Mowing lawns. Letting down hems. Hushing up an old family skeleton.

She had gone to find quiet, and that was what she found. And at first, through hurried, worried days and night, it bewildered her. How could she ever get herself set straight in the midst of all this rumpus? But presently, amazingly, though the rumpus went on, she began to see light and find that answer she was seeking.

How could she mend her shattered life, her wrecked marriage? Why, this confusion was life! This endless succession of trivial adjustments to petty details was marriage!

Here were some people who had found what she wanted—love, and faith in each other, and established security. But their harmony had not come as she had expected hers to come. No one understood anyone else perfectly, or was perfectly understood. No one was perfectly kind, considerate, noble or brave. No one had a flawless plan or method.

STRANGEST OF ALL, NO ONE'S LIFE WAS EVER PERFECTLY SET RIGHT. Everyone was constantly whirled about, grabbed at, imposed upon, surprised, shocked, disorganized. People had to take things as they came—had to even take love as it came!

"He who would save his life must lose it—"

THEY HAD SAVED THEIR LOVE BY LOSING IT IN LIFE!

What did one do when love seemed at an end? One went on living; and presently one found that love went on, too!

One goes on living. That is the answer Amy Morton finds to the chanciness of love in Helen Hull's great new book, "Heat Lightning." Every married person in America should read that book, particularly young married women who just must analyze their sensations.

Every single person should read it, too, for it holds the answer to every hunger that haunts the human heart.

Just Folks

Return

Time was he used to scoff and sneer
And laugh at simple faith and creeds.
But now when there is much to fear
He finds 'tis simple faith he needs.

When all was well and skies were fair
In arrogance the path he strode;
But now alone he kneels in prayer
And asks for strength to bear the load.

He called old teachings dull and trite
And thought success held peace of mind;
But now when things aren't going right

Though cruel are the hurt and pain
When once the flood of loss recedes,
Men may at last return again

This Recent Talk About Revolution
By Claude G. Bowers

IN HIS SPEECH in the Senate, Senator Carter Glass, speaking in no partisan spirit, as Senator Moses agreed, made a startling announcement. It is to the effect that during the Taft Administration an opinion was asked of Solicitor-General Lehmann, a very distinguished lawyer, as to the legality of bank affiliates, and that it was given—and suppressed. Glass says:

> "Although not a lawyer myself, I venture to say that it is a legal classic, searching and sweeping, and to the effect that national bank affiliates are absolutely illegal. . . . Court opinion after court opinion of both inferior courts and the Supreme Court are cited."

The opinion was suppressed by two Attorneys-General—one a Republican and one a Democrat.

The Balancing of the Budget

With the bipartisan plan of co-operation in the Senate, there are reasons to believe that the tax bill will soon be passed, and a scheme of taxation for the balancing of the budget sent back to the House. The injection of tariff features in the bill may delay passage, and, of course, will precipitate a debate unless the Democrats have concluded to abandon a tariff plank in their platform and go over to the Republicans on that issue.

But the balancing of the budget, while imperatively required and certain to have a salutary effect on public confidence, will not scratch the surface of the job Congress and the President must undertake. We are getting our money safeguarded; and in time we shall have to give some consideration to men.

Warning of Revolution

This week, on the same day two people, neither red nor radical, warned the nation of popular resentment by the use of the ominous word "revolution." One was thinking about the plight of the millions denied the inalienable right to work who literally in many instances are actually starving. We have no patience with the falsehood that no one is starving. Statesmen are men who face facts, and not ostriches who stupidly stick their heads in the sands.

Edward F. McGrady, speaking for the American Federation of Labor, said to a Senate committee:

> "If something is not done starvation is going to continue and perhaps increase, the doors of revolution are going to be thrown wide open. The Administration ought to know that more than balancing the budget is needed. Bread and butter are needed. We want to get it through work, but if we can't do that, we are going to get it anyway."

That is a very rough statement; and yet strongly reminiscent of the statement of Daniel Willard, the railroad president, who told an assembly of business men that he would steal before he would starve.

The other warning of revolution came from Col. Henry Anderson, a member of the President's Wickersham Commission, and was inspired by conditions growing out of the prohibition fiasco and scandal. This conservative, who uses his brains, says:

> "Social conditions and the improvement of the conditions that exist demand that we do something about this intolerable situation. The people are impatient and they are losing confidence in Government. There is current the feeling that has preceded every great revolutionary movement in history. . . . During the prelude to great movements aimed at the overthrow of Government, there has first been an increase in the individual crimes, then in organized crime, and finally the breakdown in Government. It is largely due here to the failure of prohibition."

How the President Can Help

Here are some thoughts on which President Hoover may well meditate. Now that the metropolitan press in the East has agreed that he is a great leader; now that he preaches the virtue of "courage," he should face the fact that there are things that can and should be done that will remove the dangers to which a labor leader and conservative business men agree.

1. Let him withdraw his objections to the Wagner bill for a prosperity loan to put jobless men to work at wages.

2. Let him withdraw his opposition to federal assistance to prevent starvation in communities where local governments and private charity is shown to be inadequate.

3. Let him send a message to Congress admitting that the "noble experiment" is a failure and recommending a law permitting light wines and beer—and the taxation of the business which is now immune.

Sowing the Seed of Ultimate Revolution

Should the first and third objects be achieved, there would probably be no necessity for the second; but you cannot deny men jobs and expect them to starve gracefully, waving the flag.

The passage and approval by the President of the Wagner bill would restore a vast army of the unemployed to the purchasing class through direct wages for needed work well done; and this would help the merchants; and the increased demand on the merchants would help the manufacturers; and the manufacturers would have to put more men to work.

The legalization of light wines and beer would put a million men to work at steady jobs; and this would help the merchants again; and again it would help the manufacturers; which again would help the unemployed. But it would do more—it would help the farmer who is no longer in the purchasing class.

When Government becomes a party to the organization of the criminal classes and to the financing of crime it is sowing the seed of ultimate revolution.

Leadership and Courage Are Needed

Has the President the courage and the leadership required? We shall know very speedily.

And there is one other thing the President can do, if he has the courage and the leadership—and that is to sign the tariff act now before him calling upon him to begin negotiations with other nations for the lowering of the barriers against international trade which has wrecked our foreign market and put millions of our laboring men out of work.

Incidentally the average man is noting with amazement that a goodly portion of the metropolitan press that has printed unnumbered columns on the need of just such action is silent as the tomb just now. He knows that economists, business men, financiers, important industries have been clamoring for it; knows the Democratic House passed such a bill; knows the Senate agreed; and knows it is now in the hands of the President. And he wonders why most of the metropolitan press is silent as the tomb.

Leadership and courage are needed in the American press just now; and it owes it to the country to urge upon the President the abandonment of his policy of economic isolation.
